ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, The Congo (UPI) — Katanga President Moise Tshombe flew today to Kolwezi to try to stamp out the last opposition there to surrender the city to the United Nations.

His European mercenaries have placed charges of dynamite at the big cobalt and other mining installations and at the power dams which supply Katanga with two-thirds of its electrical power.

Tshombe hoped to persuade the die-hard mercenaries and his gendarmerie not to blow up the Union Miniere holdings and to deliver the stronghold peacefully to U. N. troops.

Raises Miss Some

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's military pay raise proposals, to be submitted to Congress next week, will exclude more than two-thirds of the nation's one million civilian reservists.

Defense officials said today that about 100,000 officers and more than 165,000 enlisted men in the National Guard and other reserve outfits are scheduled to get the increased pay, because they are rated as volunteers.

But another 33,000 officers and 628,000 enlisted men now on the civilian military payroll, will be omitted, because they have a compulsory legal obligation for service in the reserves.

To Soften De Gaulle

BOON (UPI)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer flies to Paris tomorrow in hopes of softening French President Charles De Gaulle's tough stance against British membership in the Common Market, in a move sources said today.

Adenauer hopes to convince De Gaulle to at least keep British membership negotiations going at the Brussels conference table, sources said.

Tickets Run Out

EUREKA (AP)—Due to an error in ordering on the part of the city's finance department, Eureka motorists are enjoying a brief respite from parking tickets.

There are no tickets. And the firm in Michigan which makes the tickets for Eureka says that it will be several days before they can send some.

Stay Of Execution

WASHINGTON (AP)—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas has granted a stay to Albert J. Lessard, who was scheduled to die in San Quentin Prison's gas chamber Jan. 23.

Douglas ordered Lessard, 30, held on the prison's Death Row until the Supreme Court can hear an appeal from the California Supreme Court's denial of a writ.

Rowan, a Negro, was chosen to succeed Bernard A. Guffer at Helsinki.

Poodle Rescued In $10,000 Fire In Corte Madera Home

A white, miniature poodle, carried from a $10,000 home fire in Corte Madera near death yesterday, was alive and "doing well" in a pet hospital today.

The home, belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Bud Smith, 28 Harbor Drive, was partially destroyed by fire and rendered uninhabitable by smoke damage. The blaze, reported by neighbors at 12:15 p.m., was blamed on an electric blanket.

Jack W. Forster, a volunteer fireman who entered the burning home with a smoke mask, found the dog, "Pepe," behind a sofa. It appeared almost dead from smoke inhalation when he carried it out to Asst. Fire Chief Harold Kelly.

Kelly used a resuscitator to restore normal breathing for the animal. It was then rushed to the Madera Pet Hospital by Jack Herman, 16, of 26 Harbor Drive. The dog was given oxygen at the hospital.

"I wouldn't have given you two cents for that dog," Fire Chief Frank Nelson said. "I thought it was finished. But the hospital said today that it's going to live."

Nelson praised Forster and Kelly for their rescue.

Firemen fought the blaze which started in a bedroom for over an hour. Kelly suffered the only injury, a cut finger from broken glass.

Nelson said it was "reasonable to assume" that the fire was caused by an electric blanket in the front bedroom. The bed was "consumed" by fire and the bedroom destroyed.

Mrs. Smith, who does not smoke, told the chief she had changed the sheets on the bed before leaving the home at 10:15 a.m. At the time of the fire she was in Mill Valley, getting a new auto license. Mr. Smith was at work at Montgomery Ward and Co. in Corte Madera, and the three children, Kathy, 10, Greg, 8, and Randy, 7, were in school.

The Smiths stayed last night at the home of neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pridmore, 35 Harbor Drive. They were seeking a temporary home today.

Convict Won't Talk: 'Afraid For His Life'

The case against three men charged with extorting money from the wife of former San Quentin Prison inmate Daniel Lewis, 34, may have run aground because Lewis, afraid for his life, has refused to testify.

Lewis, who is now confined at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville, told Judge William J. McGuiness of Alameda County Superior Court yesterday in Oakland that his life is in danger as long as he is in prison.

"I can't testify," Lewis said. "Some of these guys kill just to get a name for themselves."

Lewis was called into court by Judge McGuiness because he had written letters to Alameda County Dist. Atty. Frank Coakley saying he could not testify in the trial Jan. 28 of Charles Ashton, 39, former San Quentin guard; John Logston, 26, a forger now in Soledad Prison; and Gaston Faria, 28, who is serving a robbery sentence at San Quentin.

"Do you realize that the ends of justice might be thwarted if you remain adamant in your position?" asked the judge.

"I have no choice," said Lewis. "My life is in danger as long as I am in state prison."

Associate Warden W. D. Achuff at San Quentin said that Lewis has not been an inmate there for several months, but "this sounds like Danny Lewis."

Achuff said inmates are always afraid to testify in any case of this kind for fear of reprisals, even after they are released from prison.

Postcard Flood Urges 'No' Charter Changes

Elected Attorney, Police Chief Asked

Several thousand cards advocating a "no" vote on propositions to make San Rafael's police chief and city attorney elective were mailed today by the Citizen's Committee Opposed to Charter Change.

The late-hour mailing came in a campaign started by the committee with Independent-Journal advertising in an attempt to defeat the two propositions which will be on Tuesday's special election ballot.

The campaign for a "no" vote on the police chief measure also picked up on another front. Pat Dailey, president of the Marin Committee on Political Education of the AFL-CIO, announced its board had voted to go on record as opposing the change to appointment.

The COPE committee took no position on the city attorney appointment.

Red China Reportedly Has Bomb

TOKYO (UPI) — American defense officials believe Communist China has built two atomic bombs and will test them sometime before the end of the year, the major Tokyo newspaper Mainichi reported today.

The Mainichi said U. S. officials made the disclosure to the Japanese government at a meeting of the joint U. S.-Japan security consultative committee in Tokyo.

The Japan self defense agency denied the Mainichi report after it was published but the newspaper's editors said their information was correct and refused to withdraw the story.

Mainichi said American military men did not appear greatly alarmed over the Chinese acquisition of elementary atomic explosives.

"Japan and the United States agreed that even if the weapons were tested it would not effect the military situation in the Far East," Mainichi said.

However, the Americans were reported to have expressed concern over the effects on the Japanese public of a Chinese atomic test because of the emotional and deeply rooted Japanese fear of atomic weapons.

The cards mailed by the Citizens Committee Opposed to Charter Change urged "no" votes with the argument: "Your right to vote for the candidate of your choice will be lost if the change is made. Vote NO on Jan. 22 to be sure this American privilege will still be yours."

The names of C. Paul Bettini and Thomas R. O'Toole appeared as co-chairmen of the committee. Bettini is an elected member of the San Rafael Board of Education, whose term expires in April. O'Toole is a member of the San Rafael Planning Commission, to which he was appointed by the city council a few months ago.

In announcing COPE's opposition to a change in the method of selecting police chief, Dailey said:

"We did not feel that the proposed change would bring any improvement, and it was the feeling of the delegates that in Marin County there has been a better job of policing where the chief of police is elected and not appointed."

San Rafael is the only city in Marin with an elective police chief. It is one of only three such cities in California. In See 'NO', page 3

Ordered Out —And Shot

LOME, Togo (UPI)—A 27-year-old Togolese army sergeant told today how he pursued President Sylvanus Olympio to his hiding place in a U.S. Embassy car last Sunday, ordered him out, and shot and killed him when he "tried to flee."

Etienne Eyadema gave this matter of fact account of the assassination, insisting that insurgent troops meant only to arrest Olympio, not to kill him. His story confirmed that the cause of the insurrection was the anger of troops Olympio refused to keep in service in his newly-independent nation.

Eyadema and other military leaders now share power with Olympio's successor, provisional Premier Nicolas Grunitzky. But not everybody here subscribes to the "accidental death" claim. They say Olympio would have been a danger to the insurgents if he had remained alive.

Giampoli Claims Incapacitation

Ousted Police Lt. Nick Giampoli, in an answer filed minutes before the 5 p.m. deadline yesterday, claimed he was in fact incapacitated when fired by San Rafael Police Chief Charles J. Chiesa for failure to report for work.

"I was in fact incapacitated and unable to perform the duties of my office," said Giampoli's answer.

Chiesa fired Giampoli on Dec. 12 for "failure to report to work and perform his duties."

Earlier, Giampoli had announced he would be a candidate for police chief against Chiesa on April 8 if the post is not made appointive in Tuesday's special election. Giampoli advocates appointment of the police chief.

Chiesa charged that Giampoli, who took sick leave on Oct. 23, had not filed a doctor's certificate or personal affidavit of actual incapacity, as required by city ordinance if an employee takes more than three days of sick leave.

In addition, Chiesa said that checks on Giampoli revealed he was working at his private investigative agency, Inter City Investigations at 1850 Fourth Street, while he was on sick leave from the department.

Giampoli, in his answer, requested a hearing by the personnel board, which is appointed by the city council and may be made up of the councilmen themselves.

Giampoli's statement read: "The following is my answer to the reasons stated in the letter. See ANSWER, page 3

Overdue Neophyte May Have Hit Stormy Seas

The Coast Guard was keeping a lookout but not pressing an air-sea search today for the 45-foot ketch Neophyte, which had not yet reached Hawaii with its all girl crew and skipper Lee Quinn aboard.

The ketch sailed from Sausalito on Dec. 27. It has been seen only once, 12 days ago, when a Navy ship passed two gallons of ice cream to the crew.

A U. S. Weather Bureau spokesman in Hawaii said today that the arrival of the ship must have been delayed because of a severe storm which lashed the area the Neophyte was believed to be crossing earlier in the week.

The Coast Guard, with public interest in the islands running high on the outcome of the Neophyte's voyage, last night issued the following statement:

"We feel that Mrs. Quinn knows the capabilities of her husband and the boat he is sailing. Once she reports the Neophyte overdue or we have other information which might lead us to consider her in trouble, we will launch an air-sea search.

"Until that time comes, we must conserve our search and rescue capabilities for cases of known distress.

"However, we have alerted our ships and planes to keep an eye out for the Neophyte during all local operations."

Quinn's wife, Mary Ann, who is in Honolulu after competing in a surfing championship last month, said she isn't worried, "but I imagine he's pretty busy handling the boat in this kind of weather."

An airline pilot reported he had spotted what appeared to be the ketch 45 miles off Kaneohe on northern Oahu, but a Coast Guard plane could not find it.

Jack Frost Here Again

Frost returned to many areas of Marin County early today as temperatures dropped to a chilly 25 degrees and the forecast changed from wet to dry.

The weatherman, who has not been able to stage a storm since Dec. 18, said the rain he expected the middle of next week has been canceled.

Pacific storms are skirting far north of California and hitting the mainland at Alaska.

Marinwood had the lowest reading of 25 degrees early today. Other lows were 28 at San Rafael and Novato, 31 at Tamalpais Valley.

BRITISH LABOR LEADER HUGH GAITSKELL DIES

LONDON (AP)—Labor Party leader Hugh Gaitskell, potentially Britain's next prime minister, died last night just when he appeared to be on the threshold of a political triumph.

Gaitskell's death at 56 came in the middle of the most serious governmental crisis since Suez. As opposition leader Gaitskell automatically would have become prime minister if the Laborites won forthcoming elections.

He died after two weeks' illness. A virus infection surrounding his heart and lungs was complicated by a kidney ailment.

His passing came when Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's cabinet was deeply pessimistic over Britain's chances of joining the flourishing European Common Market.

Gaitskell had warned Macmillan against the common market. Had he lived, Gaitskell's prestige as a national leader would never have been higher.

His death bequeathed to the Labor Party, which he led through seven years of factional strife, the enormous task of choosing a successor. Four candidates have been mentioned prominently. The party could be split by a struggle over the succession.

The death also could bring a general election nearer.

Macmillan is able to pick any time before October, 1964, to call an election. The longer he waits, the more chance the Laborites will have to recover from their loss.

But the Conservative government's political stock is low now because of rising unemployment, defense policy switches and a series of international setbacks.

Macmillan would be taking a big gamble if he plunged into an election with haste that could make people think he was exploiting labor's bereavement.

Gaitskell subdued extreme right and left wing elements of his party and created an image of balance, resolve and authority. He typified the compromises which bound the rambling Labor movement into a sort of popular front. Few of Gaitskell's lieutenants have displayed these qualities.

WORLD MOURNS GAITSKELL DEATH

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The world today mourned the passing of British Labor Party leader Hugh Gaitskell.

President John F. Kennedy sent condolences to the widow, Dora, saying he was "deeply grieved" by Gaitskell's death. Canadian Prime Minister John Diefenbaker said he was "very saddened" by the news, and Canadian Liberal (opposition) Leader Lester B. Pearson said he felt a "great sense of shock and grief."

Dozens of others voiced their sadness, including Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, former Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill, Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and former Prime Minister Earl (Clement) Attlee.

From the Atlantic's western shore came condolences from such prominent Americans as ex-president Dwight D. Eisenhower and U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson. U.N. Secretary Thant expressed "deepest regret."

Gaitskell had been a staunch foe of the Communists, and they reciprocated his sentiments.

The Daily Worker, the only London newspaper which did not front-page the story of Gaitskell's death, reported it briefly on page 3 under the headline, "Vigorous opponent of left policies."

In Communist East Germany, the official ADN Agency criticized Gaitskell for "refusing to listen to majority opinion in his party" and "ignoring the fact that strong and far-reaching trade relations with the Socialist (Communist) camp were an urgent necessity for Britain."

Gaitskell, a devout believer in the working classes, fought conservatives, fought liberals and fought splits in his own party to regain power after the Labor defeat in 1951.

Like President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Gaitskell has been called a traitor to his class.

He was born Hugh Todd Naylor Gaitskell April 9, 1906, the son of a colonial civil servant in India.

He grew up during World War I and while parties in Britain were unanimously calling for a "better world."

In 1922 when Winston Churchill and his conservative followers were trying to end a paralyzing general strike, Gaitskell drove strike leader's cars and passed out strike literature.

But the strike failed. Gaitskell went back to Oxford to educate himself to outthink and outsmart the conservatives.

Before World War II, Gaitskell became an economic adviser to the union leaders. With the beginning of hostilities, Churchill summoned the Laborites into a coalition government and Gaitskell spent the war years assessing spy data on Germany's economic structure.

The post-war landslide 1945 election victory sent Gaitskell into Parliament.

In 1950, Attlee appointed Gaitskell chancellor of the exchequer (treasury secretary). The party selected him its leader in 1955 and by 1959, Gaitskell had managed to patch up the feuding.

As 1963 dawned, the conservatives, because of their unemployment and defense policies and split opinions over common market entry, were losing many supporters to the Labor Party.

Public and press speculation was looking to Gaitskell as the next prime minister.

Mamie Has Flu

U.S. Presses Euromart For Britain

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)—The United States has politely notified French President Charles de Gaulle that Washington will continue to press for British membership in the common market and for a multinational nuclear arm under NATO.

The American position was set forth as de Gaulle's partners in the six-nation trading alliance won at least a delay in French efforts to bar Britain's entry.

After two days of often heated discussion, the French agreed to continue negotiations on the British application Jan. 23.

Any U.S. intervention would have to be discreet. De Gaulle already has shown that he believes Britain's entry into the common market would tend to transform the European group into an Atlantic community under American leadership.

A speech by U.S. Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen in Paris last night was seen as part of the spade work.

Bohlen said he wanted to correct what he called an illusion that "the United States has lost interest or might lose interest in defending Western Europe." He also said he wanted to knock down another illusion—that "the United States wants to dominate its allies."

This was an indirect reference to statements made by de Gaulle last Monday in which he all but slammed the common market door on Britain and rejected President John F. Kennedy's offer of Polaris missiles.

Bohlen said the United States is determined to negotiate the formation of a multinational nuclear arm within the NATO alliance.

Freezing Weather

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

A near-blizzard raged across the Central Plains today as a new seige of Arctic air brought falling temperatures, freezing rain and sleet to much of the nation.

Stiff northerly winds of 40 miles an hour whipped snow into Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma. Light snow fell across the midlands.

The mercury at Fort Worth, Tex., fell 32 degrees in six hours today, dropping to 20 degrees above zero. The temperature fell to two above at Lubbock, Tex., which yesterday enjoyed mild 54 degree weather.

A tight knot of cold air kept the mercury far below freezing over the northern plains. Butte, Mont., recorded 44 below zero today, the lowest reported.

Moscow-Peking Gap Pulling Farther Apart

BERLIN (AP)—Far from closing the Moscow-Peking gap, the East German Communist Party Congress appears to be pulling it farther apart.

That's the consensus of observers here in the wake of the storm of abuse hurled at the Chinese delegate when he addressed his fellow Communists yesterday.

The uproar was so loud that it is doubtful the 2,500 delegates heard much of what Wu Shio-Chuan had to say, in support of the thesis that the Soviet Union is soft on capitalism.

The speech was virtually ignored by the Soviet press.

Moscow newspapers printed a Tass dispatch which said the Chinese delegate "expressed ideas which ran counter to the general line of the international Communist movement and repeated attacks on fraternal parties."

While Wu spoke, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev was ostensibly absent, visiting an East Berlin television factory where he told the workers they should be grateful for the Berlin wall.

Father, Daughter Hurt In Crash —Motorist Booked For Drinking

A Santa Venetia father and daughter were injured and another motorist was booked on drunken driving charge in a collision last night on Highway 101 at Greenbrae hill.

Richard Martin Zitzman, 40, of 995 Del Canada Road, Santa Venetia, was treated at Marin General Hospital for scalp cuts. His daughter Sarah, 12, suffered a cut ear.

Booked on a drunken driving charge was Ray F. Arata, 33, of 111 C Street, San Rafael.

California Highway Patrol officers said Arata stopped in the southbound middle lane. Zitzmann braked and tried to avoid Arata's pickup truck, but skidded broadside into it and bounced into the west embankment beside the highway.

Arata told officers something went wrong with his truck, stalling the vehicle.

Mrs. Dana Fradkin, 23, wife of Independent-Journal reporter Philip Fradkin, Gate 5 Road, Sausalito, suffered scalp cuts yesterday in a two-car accident at Bridgeway Boulevard and Ebbtide Avenue, Sausalito. Mrs. Fradkin, who was treated at Marin General Hospital, was a passenger in a car driven by Teresa Ann Zabala, 24, of 38-D Ebbtide Avenue, Sausalito. Mrs. Zabala was eastbound on Ebbtide and pulled into the path of a car heading south on Bridgeway, driven by Gene Edward Clark, 25, of 419 Drake Avenue, Marin City.

Two persons were injured last night in an eight-car chain-reaction accident at the foot of Waldo Grade, south of the Marin City-Sausalito turnoff. The California Highway Patrol reported.

Treated at Marin General Hospital were William H. Wolsifer, 41, and Kathryn Wolsifer, 46, both of 88 Golden Hinde Boulevard, San Rafael, who suffered neck and shoulder pains. Their car was the seventh in line in a rear-end collision in the northbound lanes of Highway 101.

The first car in line, driven by James Leslie Chapman, 28, of 301 G Street, San Rafael, was hit by a sports car driven by Robert L. Thompson, 50, of San Francisco.

Chapman's car was knocked across the center divider into the southbound lanes, while Thompson's car slid broadside and stopped crosswise of the northbound lanes.

Next in order in the collision were cars driven by Milton Harold Cross, 20, of 24 Drake's Cove, San Rafael; Raymond Lyle Paulsen, 27, of Mountain View; Richard Byrie Smith, 36, of 11 Azalea Drive, Mill Valley; Harold Bostnick Wilde, 50, of Round Hill Road, Tiburon; Wolsifer, and William Finn Nightingale, 36, of 240 Tulane Drive, Larkspur.

Philip Frederick Biehl, 67, of San Francisco suffered minor injuries last night on Highway 101 north of the Spencer Avenue turnoff when his car hit the rear of one driven by Charles William Carroll, 56, of 10 Estates Drive, Novato. Carroll had slowed for traffic congestion ahead, caused by another accident in the northbound lanes. Biehl was taken to Marin General Hospital for treatment.

William Worrall, 45, of 21 Fawn Court, Sleepy Hollow, suffered scalp and ear cuts in an accident at Butterfield Road and Deer Hollow Road, Sleepy Hollow, about 2 a.m. today. Mrs. Worrall, who was following in another car, said a speeding driver ran her husband's car off the road. He was treated at Marin General Hospital.

Law Invoked Against, By Lawyer

California's relatively new "discovery" law which gives both prosecution and defense the right to examine each other's evidence was invoked both by and against attorney George T. Davis yesterday in two different cases in San Francisco.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Walter Giubbini filed a motion in behalf of the state in the pending murder trial of Sgt. Ruben E. Rudolph, accused of killing his wife Liselotte, whose body was found last May near the tunnel between Fort Barry and Fort Cronkhite.

Giubbini seeks to inspect all defense statements taken in behalf of Rudolph by Davis. It is believed the first time the prosecution has the discovery law in San Francisco.

Davis, who is also defending jeweler J. Robert Gomez of Mill Valley in a jewel theft trial, demanded that Deputy Dist. Atty. Keith Varni hand over copies of his notes on conversations with prospective prosecution witnesses in that case.

Davis told Varni in a letter that he will move Monday morning that the notes be turned over to the judge for a decision on whether the defense has a right to them under the rules of discovery.

Last Tuesday Davis asked for disqualification of Judge Norman Elkington of San Francisco Superior Court in the twice-postponed trial of Gomez. A ruling is due Monday on this motion.

AFRAID

Continued from page 1 disturbed guy and is particularly susceptible to such pressure," said Achuff. He said there is no investigation of the alleged extortion ring now at San Quentin, the case being entirely in the hands of Alameda County authorities.

The investigation began when Mrs. Marion Silva of Oakland, mother of Lewis, appealed to Gov. Edmund G. Brown for help because she said her son's life was threatened by extortionists.

Brown told Oakland police, who laid a trap at Mrs. Silva's home and caught an alleged accomplice of the suspects taking money from Mrs. Silva.

Ashton, accused of making the threat to Mrs. Silva, already had resigned from the prison staff at San Quentin after being suspected of smuggling contraband into the institution.

Marina Residents Hit Commute Plan

Residents of San Francisco's Marina had some unkind things to say about Marin County commuters at a meeting yesterday in San Francisco City Hall.

About 200 residents protested a city engineer's plan for routing more Golden Gate Bridge traffic through the Marina.

"I say we don't have a traffic problem," said Rear Adm. Gill M. Richardson, president of the Marina Property Owners Assn. "The ones who have a traffic problem are the people who live in Marin. They don't pay taxes here."

"They voted against rapid transit."

The meeting was called by Director of Public Works Reuben H. Owens so he could sample opinion on a plan that would make Bay and Cervantes reversible one-way streets, eastbound in the morning and westbound in the evening. They would be two-way during non-rush hours.

Owens must soon go before San Francisco County supervisors with a recommendation on the plan.

Only person defending Marin residents yesterday was Thomas D. Hardcastle of Novato, a new member of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District board.

He said commuters contribute a great deal to San Francisco's economy.

"Marin did not vote against rapid transit," he reminded the group. "We were forced out because engineers said the bridge would not accommodate trains."

Early Halt To Sewage Is Urged

Early issuance of a cease and desist order to halt discharge of untreated sewage at the mouth of Bolinas Lagoon has been recommended to the Regional Water Pollution Control Board in Oakland by its staff.

A supplemental report from the staff, made public today, said it did not matter whether the order hit the still-existing Bolinas Sanitary District or its presumed successor, Bolinas Public Utility District.

Preliminary steps have been taken by the public utility district to accept responsibilities of the sanitary district, according to chairman Sherman Smith of the utility district. Smith said it may be some time before the take-over occurs, as county supervisors must set and hold public hearing before granting permission.

The control board staff noted public hearing before granting permission. The control board staff noted "progress by agencies in the area toward finding a solution to present and probable future sewerage problems."

Nonetheless issuance of a cease and desist order was recommended on this ground: "Such an order will put the responsible agency (probably the Bolinas Public Utility District) under a firm time schedule for requiring with the waste discharge requirements of the regional board."

The report said the staff might not be able to put a tentative draft before the board by its next meeting on Feb. 21, but it was recommended that the matter be placed on the board's agenda anyway.

Mrs. Gross Defends Her Grader Stand

Mrs. Joyce Gross of Mill Valley today defended a letter in support of Democrat William F. Grader for Congress which was widely mailed on the letterhead of "Marin Republicans for Grader."

The letter was attacked yesterday by State Sen. John F. McCarthy and Assemblyman William T. Bagley, co-chairman of Republican Donald H. Clausen's campaign for Congress, as "another Wheelwright letter," referring to a letter circulated just before the Nov. 6 election which bore the name of George W. Wheelwright. They charged in a joint statement that Mrs. Gross "is and has been an avid Democratic worker."

DEMO FOR GOP

Replied Mrs. Gross: "If my memory serves correctly these gentlemen, Republicans both, have taken great pride in their 'Democrats for McCarthy' and 'Democrats for Bagley' committees during their respective election campaigns."

"Am I to assume that this practice is desirable only when Democrats cross party lines to vote for Republicans?"

"As a matter of fact, as recently as last October at the League of Women Voters candidates' night in Kentfield, Mr. Bagley made a long statement deploring the loss of cross-filing, and the departure of Californians from our good old tradition of voting for the man instead of following the party label."

REGISTRATION

Mrs. Gross said she moved to Marin in 1955 and was registered as a Republican here early in 1956. A check with the county clerk's office confirmed the registration.

Last year, Mrs. Gross was Northern California campaign chairman for Ralph Richardson for state superintendent of schools. Richardson lost to Maxwell Rafferty. State superintendent is elected on a non-partisan ballot, but Richardson is a Democrat and Rafferty a Republican.

REDWOOD HIGH'S ELECTION TOUGH

Redwood High School students are having a difficult time electing class officers.

Elections were held Jan. 10. But then, said Beverly Sadler, student commissioner of elections, it was decided that they should be held over because some candidates had filed their petitions too late, apparently through misunderstandings.

Yesterday, students trooped to the polls again. But today, Miss Sadler announced that voting for junior class treasurer and vice president and freshman and sophomore vice presidents had resulted in ties for all four offices.

This appears to be the first time in the history of elections that so many tie votes resulted from one day's balloting, a tie vote being extremely rare. The tallies of votes are not announced, school policy being to "protect the losers' feelings."

Winners of officers where no tie vote resulted yesterday were announced by Miss Sadler as follows:

Seniors: Randy Keller, president; Gary (Jose) Jimenez, vice president; Carol Breidenstein, secretary; Buffy Cooney, treasurer.

Savings, Loan Firm Elects

Jordan L. Martinelli was again elected Tuesday to head the board of directors of the Marin County Financial Corp. and its subsidiary, Marin County Savings and Loan Assn.

Fred F. Enemark will continue as executive vice president and manager. Jordan L. Martinelli Jr. was elected vice president and assistant manager.

Directors elected to head both organizations were John F. Ryan, Dr. Matthew E. Hazeltine, Carlos R. Freitas, Johannes Petersen, Jack Craemer, Enemark, and Martinelli.

'NO'

Bettini said his committee favored keeping the police chief and city attorney elective because "politics would enter if the city council appointed them."

Mayor John F. McInnis took an opposite view, declaring the proposals to amend the charter to make the posts appointive were put on the ballot specifically to eliminate the jobs from politics.

"One of the functions of the city council is to pass ordinances pertaining to the public safety," said McInnis. "These ordinances may be unpopular with some of the citizenry. The officer charged with their enforcement would be free of dependence for his job on the votes of those citizens who may not like the ordinances."

As an example, he cited downtown parking restrictions, which he said are "extremely unpopular with merchants and the shopping public." Complaints against them, he contended, "should go direct to the city council, and not, as they do now, to the official responsible for enforcement."

McInnis pointed to the reasoning of City Atty. A. E. Bagshaw, who himself proposed making the city attorney post appointive. Bagshaw pointed out that few lawyers have specialized knowledge of municipal law, and that if the council appointed a city attorney it could choose one who would specialize in that field.

"The position of superintendent of schools is similar to those of police chief and city attorney, in that he is a specialist charged with carrying out the directions of the elective board of education," said McInnis.

He noted also that the planning commission is appointed by the city council to handle a specific function and advise the council in its particular field.

"Unquestionably the right of Americans to vote is a dear one and not to be given up," said McInnis. "But that does not mean that every public job should be an elective one."

The proposed charter changes would make police chief and city attorney appointive by the city council for four-year terms.

The council has voted that a procedure for examination for police chief be set up, if the charter change affecting that job is approved. The procedure calls for an outside agency to give the written examinations and three outside police officials plus two local citizens to give oral examinations. The council would choose from the three candidates scoring highest on the examination.

Police Chief Charles J. Chiesa has announced his intention to run for a second term in April, and his opposition to making his post appointive. Former Police Lt. Nick Giampoli, who has announced his candidacy against Chiesa, and former Police Chief Frank Kelly, whom Chiesa defeated for the office four years ago, have both endorsed the idea of appointing the chief through an examination procedure.

City Attorney Bagshaw has announced that he will not seek another term in the April election, regardless of the outcome of Tuesday's voting.

Marinite Carries Message To Japan

Carl M. Halvarson, assistant to the president of Golden Gate Baptist Seminary at Strawberry Point, left Mill Valley for Tokyo today to participate in the Japan new life movement.

His job, as public relations consultant, will be to work through newspapers to report on the Japan Baptist convention movement whose purpose is "to present the message of Christianity to the entire nation."

Japanese Baptists plan to hold special meetings from March 30 to May 5 in five major Japanese cities. Halvarson, who lives with his family in Mill Valley, plans to return April 19 visiting seminaries in Stockholm, Rome and Beirut enroute.

One vital reason for the new life movement, Halvarson stated, "is the recent editorials in Japan's leading newspapers which point out the prevalence of a 'spirit vacuum and a moral need' within the country."

Persons who will participate in the spring crusade include Evangelist Billy Graham, stage and screen star Gregory Walcott, Olympic champion Wilma Rudolph, opera star Norman Treigle and Negro singer Ethel Waters.

Halvarson has been assistant to President Harold K. Graves since 1960.

Methodists Recognize Ability Of Young Mind

By DORMAN CORDELL

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The high intelligence of today's children, a subject of intensive study by the nation's educators, has not been overlooked by the churches.

Next year, the Methodist Church, second largest Protestant body in the United States after Southern Baptists, will become the first denomination to take wholesale action in the matter.

The Methodists will discard all lessons and teaching materials now used in their weekly church schools — some denominations call them Sunday Schools — for children from birth through the sixth grade.

They will introduce a new curriculum, acknowledging the advanced intelligence level of children and presenting broad theological themes at an earlier age.

"The Gospel hasn't changed, but the depth into which the child will be introduced to the Gospel has been changed because of the changes in the abilities of children and the opportunities of children," says Dr. Edward C. Peterson, editor of children's publications for the church.

The new curriculum will be designed to encourage research by the children, Dr. Peterson said in an interview during the biennial meeting of executive secretaries of Methodist Conference boards of education, where the new curriculum was discussed.

"Theology is meaningful to them only as they see its relationship to themselves," he said. "Our purpose is not to tell them, but to lead them to explore until they find answers which satisfy them."

In an article he wrote for a Methodist publication to explain the forthcoming curriculum, Dr. Peterson said:

"The new curriculum materials are being designed to help children explore life's big questions and problems, acquire understandings and have experiences through which they may enter knowingly into a redemptive fellowship with God. It will emphasize faith, hope and love."

phasize faith, hope and love.

"The problem of sin, death, disappointment and tragedy will be recognized, but not apart from salvation, resurrection and faith in the final triumph of goodness."

The 3.5 million children in Methodist church schools will begin to use the new curriculum in September 1964.

Dr. Arthur Jacobs of New York, administrative secretary of the national office of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, will speak at the 8:30 p.m. services Friday at Temple Rodef Shalom, 170 North San Pedro Road, Santa Venetia.

Dr. Jacobs, on the West Coast to inaugurate the Biennial Convention of Reform Jewish Congregations in Northern California, will speak to the Marin congregation on "The Reform Synagogue: Where Is It Heading?"

He is former executive director of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society and management consultant to the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. During World War II, he served as assistant to the director of the Bureau of Manpower Utilization of the War Manpower Commission.

Church-State Legal Fight Just Begun

NEW YORK (AP) — School prayers made big headlines last year, but 1963 may well see even greater controversy develop over the issue of church-state separation.

The Supreme Court's decision last June banning official school prayers in public schools left unanswered many questions dealing with the relationship of schools and the church.

Foremost is the matter of just what constitutes an official prayer.

Would any prayer said regularly in a public school be an official prayer?

Two cases to come before the court this winter are expected to throw new light on the question of how far public schools may go in allowing prayers and Bible reading.

One pertains to an appeal by Madalyn Murray of Baltimore from a 4-3 decision by Maryland's Court of Appeals.

The Maryland court upheld a Baltimore School Board regulation calling for Bible reading and recitation of the Lord's Prayer at daily school-opening exercises.

Attorneys general of at least 10 states have agreed to support Atty. Gen. Thomas B. Finan of Maryland in his case.

In the second case, Pennsylvania state officials are appealing a decision by a three-judge federal court in Philadelphia. The special court decided that a Pennsylvania law requiring Bible reading in public schools violates the Constitution.

The June prayer ruling was probably the court's most important to date on the church-state issue as affecting public schools.

Earlier decisions of the court on church-state matters were concerned largely with lunches, text books and school buses.

Some clergymen predict a major development of Protestant parochial schools if the court rules out public school prayer in any form.

In New York State, where the prayer case started, new questions relating to this already have arisen to confront James E. Allen, the state education commissioner.

Nine parents are protesting the Levittown School District's practice of allowing teachers to read either a passage from the Bible or the Declaration of Independence or have the pupils recite the fourth stanza of "America."

This stanza ends: "Great God our King."

Allen has reserved decision. He did rule that the national anthem could be sung or recited in schools as long as it was not designated as a prayer. The Hicksville School Board had initiated the practice.

Both of the New York cases developed after the Supreme Court banned the non-sectarian 22-word prayer recommended by the State Board of Regents, educational governing body.

Justice Hugo Black, in the court majority opinion, said the government has no business sponsoring "official prayers."

In Miami, Fla., a group of agnostics and Jews say they will take to the Supreme Court their fight against daily Bible readings in Florida's public schools.

The practice, required by law, was upheld last summer by the Florida Supreme Court.

A similar issue was raised indirectly in Georgia in litigation over whether tax-exempt privileges could be withdrawn from private colleges that admit Negroes.

The Georgia Supreme Court held there was no conflict between church and state and that the college involved in the case, Emory University, was entitled to the exemption.

NEW WING—Rev. Jerald H. Traeger looks at new classroom addition at First Baptist Church, San Anselmo. (Independent-Journal photo)

Hub Baptists Overflow Into $76,000 Classroom Addition

San Anselmo First Baptist Church's $76,000 addition will be dedicated at 3 p.m. tomorrow, two months after work began.

The two-story wing has a 41-by-52-foot fellowship hall that can serve as a basketball court and as volleyball courts. It also includes a large kitchen, four classrooms a nursery and crib room.

"We really have lots of room now," Rev. Jerald H. Traeger said.

The building was designed by Edward Hageman and Associates of San Rafael.

First use of the new building was Wednesday when the annual meeting of the congregation was held in the fellowship hall on the second floor of the new wing.

The hall has a pine ceiling, mahogany walls and laminated wood arches similar to the arches in the sanctuary built 10 years ago.

Those expected at the dedication ceremony include Mayor John M. Reichmuth of San Anselmo; Rev. George Walker, president of the Marin County Ministerial Fellowship; Rev. Theron Duerfeldt, representing the Northern California Baptist Convention; Rev. Lynn Hodges, executive secretary of the American Baptist Union of the San Francisco Bay Cities, and Lester Allison, moderator for the Golden Gate Baptist Assn.

Also expected are four of the church's former pastors, Rev. Floyd Brown, Rev. Fred I. Drexler, Rev. Harry Guckert and Rev. Jesse Parker.

Faiths Join In Week Of Unity Prayer

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Christians of every communion—Protestants, Catholics, Anglicans and Orthodox — are marking a week of prayer for Christian unity.

This has become an annual observance. When it began on a small scale in 1940, it seemed like a very far-fetched idea for Christians of different confessions to pray for unity. Their relations were so strained by centuries of mutual distrust and animosity that it was hard to see how they could even achieve a truce, let alone reunion.

But a tremendous change has taken place during the past two decades. How far and fast events have moved is witnessed by the fact that in 1963, it does not seem particularly remarkable—perhaps not even newsworthy—that all of the branches of Christendom will be praying during the next seven days for God to lead them into that "oneness" which is the expressed will of Christ.

In San Rafael for the first time St. Raphael's Church is holding a Chair of Unity Octave which includes prayers for Christian unity and lectures by Roman Catholic priests. The first of eight meetings opened last night. The series coincides with the Jan. 18-25 dates of the Christian unity week.)

The World Council of Churches is one of those developments. Prior to its establishment 15 years ago, there was little cooperation, and still less understanding, among the non-Roman Catholic churches of the world. Today more than 200 Protestant, Anglican and Orthodox denominations are working together amicably in the world council.

Although they have found practical cooperation easier to achieve than doctrinal unity, they are working on the latter, too. Next July, more than 500 of the world's leading theologians will meet in Montreal to spend two weeks exploring the differences in "faith and order" which exist between member churches of the world council.

Long after non-Catholic Christians began to draw together, in what ecclesiastics call the "ecumenical movement," the Church of Rome remained aloof. It did not even formally recognize the existence of the World Council of Churches.

Then, four years ago, Pope John XXIII ascended to the chair of St. Peter.

Almost immediately, unprecedented things began to happen. Protestant, Catholic and Orthodox Christians became "separated brethren" rather than "schismatics and heretics." The Vatican established formal liaison with the World Council of Churches, and sent official observers to its 1961 assembly in New Delhi. The Archbishop of Canterbury called on the Pope—blazing a trail which many protestant leaders were to follow—and was very warmly received. Protestant bodies were invited to send observers to the Vatican Council. They accepted, and their delegates were treated with a cordial hospitality which made a profound impression on all of Protestantism.

It is no exaggeration to say that more barriers between Catholics and Protestants have fallen during the four years of Pope John's reign than in all of the preceding four centuries since the Reformation.

The transformation has been so swift and dramatic that it amazes even those church leaders who have worked hardest to promote it.

"The ending of bitterness between Protestantism and Catholicism in our time is little short of miraculous," says Rev. Arthur Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury.

"There have been few times in the course of the Christian era," said Pope John in his Christmas message, "when so ardent a longing has been felt in human hearts for the unity desired by Our Lord."

"The change in climate," says the Christian Century Magazine, "can be described only as the work of the Holy Spirit."

BISHOP PIKE DUE IN MARIN NEXT MONTH

Bishop James A. Pike, of the Episcopal Diocese of California, will consecrate St. Columba's Church at Inverness and St. Aidan's Church in Bolinas in separate services Feb. 10.

Members of St. Columba's Church at an annual meeting last Saturday learned that the church has paid off its debt and is now eligible for consecration. St. Aidan's is already debt-free. The two missions are served by Rev. Francis W. Read.

Members elected to the bishop's committee at the meeting were Howard P. Wurtz, Alfred L. West Jr. and Mrs. Richard B. Lyttle. Wurtz was elected delegate to the diocesan convention.

Volunteers Buy New Equipment As First Gift

A new piece of life-saving equipment for San Rafael General Hospital will be purchased by the Project Volunteers as their first gift to the hospital, members of the unit announced this week.

They voted to purchase another Bird respirator, used for treatment of patients with serious breathing difficulties, after seeing a demonstration given by an anesthetist on the hospital medical staff.

At their meeting, members also met Mrs. Ilona Bellak, director of nursing, and Mrs. Jean Casarotti, head surgical nurse. Mrs. Bruce B. Bales, co-chairman, presided.

To obtain the respirator, the unit will use proceeds of the "mystery bus ride" in November and a champagne theater party planned for February. At the same time that they stage these projects, the volunteers are making preparations for formal organization of the unit.

Council Hears Talk By Marin Psychologist

Dr. William Pemberton of Mill Valley "stimulated" the audience attending the meeting sponsored by the North Marin Council Parent-Teacher Assn. Thursday night at Marin School in Novato.

A consulting psychologist, Dr. Pemberton included in his talk semantics, assumptive knowledge and epistemology. Dr. Pemberton stated that reality is whatever one believes it to be. Brains are all alike and reality is determined by one's assumptive knowledge.

As a demonstration, paper which had supposedly been treated with a chemical was passed to the audience. They were asked to taste it. At a show of hands, the majority thought the paper tasted bitter. Others thought it had no taste.

He then showed the audience a picture, and asked them what they saw. Some saw an old lady with her head bent forward and others saw a young girl with her head turned.

In this manner, Doctor Pemberton showed that the audience saw and tasted the same thing, and yet they were unable to agree on it.

According to Doctor Pemberton, if we cannot agree on what we see, then we have a lack of communication.

In the four stages of sophistry, Doctor Pemberton gave examples. The primitive stage, or infant, which responds to fear, the second and third stages which is a child or a youth which responds to anger, and the fourth stage, maturity or the ideal stage where the mind is open to both sides of an issue and an effort is made to resolve the problem to everyone's interest.

In these stages, he placed nations. Africa in Number 1 or primitive, and Khrushchev in Numbers 2 and 3.

When buying rubber footwear, make certain of a proper fit. The boots and overshoes should slip on and off shoes easily without stretching or tugging. Generally, you should get a size larger than your shoes.

Stanford Hires Ex-Enemy John Ralston As New Coach

STANFORD (UP) — John Ralston, who used to flatten Stanford halfbacks when he played for the arch-rival University of California, went over to the enemy today as the Indians' new football coach.

The highly-successful Utah State mentor was hired by Stanford yesterday for a three-year period at a salary believed to be in the $17,000 range. President J. E. Wallace Sterling announced Ralston's selection with the appointment subject to approval by the school's board of trustees.

Ralston, 35, didn't get the call until after Bob Reynolds—former Stanford football great—had vainly tried to make Navy's Wayne Hardin change his mind about staying on with the Middies.

Hardin had figured prominently in the Stanford race until he signed a new two year pact on Wednesday to return to Annapolis.

Reynolds, a member of a committee advising Sterling on selecting a coach, visited Hardin at the Crosby golf tournament. He went there amid reports that numerous alumni from the Los Angeles area were opposed to hiring an ex-California gragger who later had been on Lynn Waldorf's staff there and coached the Bear frosh.

But if some alumni were moaning, all was sweetness and light amid the Stanford athletic brass.

"In John Ralston we are getting a man who will do the kind of a job we want," said Athletic Director Al Masters. "He will coach hard-nosed, interesting, and winning football. We know that John will be popular with his players as well as the other students, faculty, alumni and fans."

Ralston succeeds Jack Cur-tice, whose inability to please various alumni factions is said to have been one of the reasons for his downfall. And in his five years at Stanford, Cur-tice had a mark of only 14 wins against 36 losses.

Ralston, who posted a mark of 31 victories, 11 losses and one tie in four years at Utah State, learned of his selection after he had given up waiting for word in the Bay Area and went back to Logan, Utah.

He checked out Wednesday when a period of silence en-shrouded the university shortly after he seemed to have the job in his back pocket. Then he was notified of his selection yesterday.

"I am pleased to accept a new responsibility of representing Stanford University," said Ralston, who was a crashing line-backer for two Cal Rose Bowl teams during the Waldorf era. "I have enjoyed the many associations I have had with players, alumni and administration of Utah State."

He took over the Aggies in 1959 and got them off the floor with a sharp running attack out of a variable T which he had learned under Waldorf. Utah State gained the Sun and Gotham Bowls under his direction, was undefeated in 1961 and twice shared the Sky-line Conference title with Wyoming. Much of the success was traced to his recruiting abilities.

It was after the 1961 season that the Utags played in the Gotham Bowl and lost to Bay-lor, 24-9. Ralston's halftime talk to his team was carried on television.

Ralston is only the seventh man to coach the Indians since the famed era of Pop Warner in 1924-1932.

He said that it would take him "at least a week or so before I can complete an organization and announce assistants" for the new job.

Tony Knap, Ralston's assistant at Utah State, seemed in line to succeed him as the Ag-gies' head coach unless he joined Ralston at Stanford.

NFL Probe Continuing

NEW YORK (AP) — National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has broken his silence in the pro football betting investigation to reveal that the probe is continuing, that he has unearthed no wrongdoing of a criminal nature and he will announce the findings as soon as possible.

San Rafael Walks To 57-43 Win

San Rafael's Bulldog cagers, led by a 25-point performance from junior forward Rod Monti, sank the Novato Hornets last night 57-43 in a Marin Athletic League game on the San Rafael courts.

Although Novato got off to a 14-12 lead in the first quarter, San Rafael came to life and left the court at the halftime intermission with a 31-26 bulge. The Bulldogs increased their lead for the rest of the game.

San Rafael was guilty of too many fouls which accounted for 18 of Novato's points. San Rafael committed 22 fouls as compared to only seven for the Hornets.

Rozelle said he does not yet have the full facts, but is attempting to complete them.

"Our goal is to wrap it up with one announcement," he said yesterday, in a briefing session for news agency reporters who had asked for a report of progress on the probe.

The league began its investigation—which it said was one of a series it regularly conducts—last month after owner-coach George Halas of the Chicago Bears asked for a check into whispered rumors of a betting scandal.

Since then, several players have been questioned and one took a lie detector test. Alex Karras of the Detroit Lions admitted he had bet on games, but insisted he meant he bet cigarettes or cigars with friends, and Carrol Rosenbloom, the owner of the Baltimore Colts denied he had bet on his team.

Betting of any kind is barred by NFL rules.

But Rozelle, asked if the investigation had uncovered any point shaving or throwing of games, replied:

"The strongest thing I can say is this: Our investigation up to this point has developed nothing of a criminal nature.

"If the facts justify disciplinary action at the conclusion of our investigation, such action will be taken and an announcement will be made. But we're not going to jump at conclusions and we'll make no announcement until we've assembled all the facts we can."

REBOUNDING

San Rafael outrebounded Novato 33-24, Monti leading the pack with 10.

The two big rebounders were also the point makers. Monti's 25 points were paralleled by Willard who led the Hornets with 15 digits. Other cagers in the double scoring column were San Rafael's Pat Haven with 12 and Bill Pendergrass with 10. Monti picked up 17 of his total in the first half of action.

EQUAL PERCENTAGE

Both teams hit for 36 per cent from the floor, San Rafael hitting on 26 out of 71 shots and Novato scoring on 14 out of 39 attempts.

San Rafael coach Mike Diaz used 13 players in the game but only six of them hit the scoring column. San Rafael's record for league play this year is 2-1. Novato is 1-1.

Score by quarters:

Novato	14	12	6	11—43
San Rafael	12	19	14	12—57

Novato—Nick Willard, 6-3-15; Arnold Schuch, 1-1-3; Tom Miller, 3-1-7; Kelly French, 0-2-2; Barry Hackmeyer, 0-2-2; Ken Beade, 1-3-5; Dave Ralph, 1-2-4; Bob Nichols, 2-1-5.

San Rafael—Rod Monti, 11-3-25; Bill Pendergrass, 5-0-10; John Franzman, 2-1-3; Steve Spurling, 1-1-3; Tom Degenhardt, 1-0-2; Pat Haven, 6-0-12.

BUILDERS TO PLAY SUNDAY IN HUB CITY

The Billings-Hutchison Builders will try to extend their winning streak to 12 tomorrow when they take on the base-ballers of Milen's Jewelers—the last team to beat the Builders three months ago—at San Anselmo's Memorial Park at 1:30.

The Milen's club won the first half of the tough Alameda Winter League and are tied with Billings-Hutchison and Fitzpatrick Chevrolet for the top spot in the second half. The Builders finished the first half in second place, one game behind Milen's Jewelers.

The jeweler baseball team is headed by Jess Gonder, who batted .343 last year for San Diego in the Pacific Coast League to lead the league hitters. Another big bat for the jeweler nine is Bill Williams, an outfielder for Salt Lake City of the PCL, who hit 29 home runs last season.

The batting order for the Builders will be:

Ron Blum, ss; Dick Spackman, 1b; Ron Cole, 3b; Chris Cannizarro, c; Don Lauters, 2b; Bob Joyce, lf; Bill Gallagher, rf; Jerry Daniele, cf, and either Jerry Walters or Bob De-Rosa, p.

CROSBY TOURNAMENT Casper Threatens

PEBBLE BEACH (AP) — Former Crosby tournament champion Billy Casper confidently moved into contention today in Bing's $50,000 golf classic, one stroke off the surprising pace set by par-breaking young Dave Hill, as the battle for leadership shifted to Pebble Beach's exacting Oceanside course.

The four front-runners, with Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus in challenging position, make their third round bids over the usually windswept 6,747-yard Pebble Beach layout where Casper swept by Bob Rosburg to win in 1958.

Casper, one of the most consistent pros on the tour, sometimes plays the difficult Pebble Beach course like it was his private domain and, in 1961, blazed around the par 72 test in a course record of 65.

Billy toured the rolling Monterey Peninsula Country Club course yesterday in the second round in a 7-under-par 65 while the 24-year-old Hill put fine rounds back to back for an impressive 68-69-137 at the halfway point. Casper posted 73-65-138.

Three strokes off the pace at 140 were Palmer, who has done his share of scrambling in this 22nd playing of Bing's charity show, and Nicklaus, already a big winner on the pro circuit.

As the tournament went into its third round, Casper looked like the man in the hot seat. Had he not stumbled into a couple of double bogeys at Cypress Point in his first round he might have been in command.

Today's action at Pebble Beach was scheduled for a national telecast. The four leaders were playing this course. They already have played the other two being used for the tournament—Cypress Point and Monterey Peninsula.

After today, the field will be cut to the low scoring 60 pros and leading 45 pro-amateur teams. They'll battle it out in the final 18 holes, also to be telecast, at Pebble Beach tomorrow.

Bunched at 141 were Julius Boros, the first day leader; George Bayer, who was in a second place tie before he slipped back; and Phil Rodgers.

Gary Player, wiry little South African star who with Palmer was favored to lead the field of 156 pros, slipped back to 142, grouped with Paul Hareney, the veteran Art Wall and newcomer Gene Bone of Louisville, Ky.

Defending titlist Doug Ford faded back to 148 along with 19 other pros.

Hill and Hollywood personality Phil Harris held onto their lead in the pro-amateur event with a best ball of 64 in their second round, and a two-day total of 127. That put them one stroke ahead of the teams of pro Duff Lawrence and singer John Raitt, and Dan Sikes and actor James Garner.

Marin Nips Drake In Overtime, 51-49

Marin Catholic High School scored only two points in a three-minute overtime period last night but that was enough to beat Drake 51-49 in a see-saw cage battle on the Drake courts.

Marin Catholic's Bob Redding made the game-winning bucket with only one second left in the overtime period after his teammates tried to sink a basket on two previous shots in the closing seconds but missed. The Wildcats grabbed the rebounds on both misses and finally fed the ball to Redding who scored.

The lead changed hands throughout the game but Marin

Catholic pulled out in front by six points in the fourth quarter. Then the Drake Pirates closed the gap. When the final horn sounded, the game was knotted at 49-49.

The overtime period was mostly ball control as both teams tried a few shots and missed.

Lorry Galassi of Drake, usually one of the Pirate high scorers, was held to one free throw in the scoring column. Galassi committed four fouls before the first half was completed and sat out part of the second quarter and all of the third stanza.

Tam Cagers Whip Terra Linda 65-45

The Tamalpais High School cagers rolled on to their third straight victory in the Marin Athletic League last night when the Indians walloped the Terra Linda Trojans 65-45 in the Tam gym.

It was a matter of who gets the rebounds and the shots as the Trojans hit on 53 per cent from the floor, as compared to only 36 per cent for Tam.

But the difference was that Tam outrebounded Terra Linda 39-16. The Indians tried more than twice the number of shots from the floor than did Terra Linda, 76 to 33.

And if you don't shoot, you don't make the points. The Indians made 28 field goals and nine free throws. Terra Linda sank 17 buckets and hit on 11 free throws.

The Trojans got off to an opening lead in the first quarter, 15-12. But then Tam threw up a full court press in the second period and kept it for the rest of the game. It proved too much for Terra Linda which never threatened in the next three periods.

Tam forward Jim Durbin was the game's high-point man as he sunk eight baskets and a pair of free throws for 18 points. Tam's high scoring guards, Warren Domino and Art Ford, made 11 and 15 points respectively.

Bob King scored 13 points for Terra Linda and was followed closely by Don Dreusike with 12 points.

Tam's outstanding rebounding was handled by center Art Foster and Domino with nine each, and Durbin with five.

Score by quarters:

Terra Linda	15	10	9	11—45
Tamalpais	15	20	18	15—65

Marin Catholic guard Ron O'Connell was the high man for the Wildcats, sinking eight field goals and three free tosses for 19 points. High men for Drake were Larry Gaddy with 14, John McBride with 13 and John Wallace with 9.

It was Marin Catholic's second win in as many games and gave the Pirates a one-win, two loss record in league competition.

Score by quarters:

Marin Catholic	7	13	17	12—51

Builders To Play Sunday In Hub City

The Billings-Hutchison Builders will try to extend their winning streak to 12 tomorrow when they take on the base-ballers of Milen's Jewelers—the last team to beat the Builders three months ago—at San Anselmo's Memorial Park at 1:30.

The Milen's club won the first half of the tough Alameda Winter League and are tied with Billings-Hutchison and Fitzpatrick Chevrolet for the top spot in the second half. The Builders finished the first half in second place, one game behind Milen's Jewelers.

The jeweler baseball team is headed by Jess Gonder, who batted .343 last year for San Diego in the Pacific Coast League to lead the league hitters. Another big bat for the jeweler nine is Bill Williams, an outfielder for Salt Lake City of the PCL, who hit 29 home runs last season.

Treadway Kingpin At Greenbrae

Dick Treadway again led the bowlers at Greenbrae Lanes during the week with a high series of 688, made up of games of 242, 236 and 210. His action was in the 900 Classic League.

Close behind in series play was Roy Deffner with a fine 682 made up of games of 244, 224 and 214, also in the 900 Classic.

High game for the week was rolled by Bud Kimmell, 265, in the Nite Owls League. Other high games were rolled by Bob Davis, a 263 in the Brunswick Travel League; Ray Kemp, 259 in the Merry Mixers League, and George Goodfellow, 253 in the Groggy Fours League.

For the women, Sharon Miller of the Coffee Cuppers League rolled the high series with a 579 headed by a 232 game. High game was tossed by Marilyn Epidendio, a 236 on her way to a 575 series in the NCBPA women's team tournament.

The Country Club Bowl-sponsored team rolled the highest combined three-game series in Marin for quite a while while bowling in the 900 Classic League at Greenbrae. The total score for the series was 3,059 in 15 games. That's a 204 average per man, per game!

Don Clausen

Dear Friends:

The campaign for Congress is fast drawing to a close.

It has been a memorable and stimulating experience to meet face to face so many of the voters of this vast District and discuss the issues with them. I only regret there has not been time to meet each of you personally.

As stated at the outset of this campaign, I have studiously avoided personal attacks on my opponents, and have tried through every medium possible to bring to the voters my position on those issues of importance to the First District and the nation. Because of unfortunate circumstances in the general election last November, I was not afforded this opportunity.

I feel that my seven years elected service as Supervisor, my lifelong residence in the District, my varied and extensive civic work not only equip me to be aware of the problems of our District, but also give me the know-how to do something about them.

Last-minute attempts may be made, as they were last year, to distort and smear the true facts of my candidacy, my background, and my stand on the issues. I have great faith in the people and believe they will reject any such eleventh hour tactics and, further, that they will repudiate those who attempt to deceive at the polls.

In the time-honored tradition of American elections, I stand ready to be judged by you.

Sincerely,

Don Clausen

TODAY'S EDITORIAL

Don't Be Fooled By Any Last Minute Political Trick

Because of the performances just prior to the Nov. 6 general election, it seems appropriate that we should today warn voters of Marin County about the possibility of last-minute political trickery.

Let's frankly face one fact: Both sides have been working for weeks and months trying to find things on which they can capitalize. If they had found any they would have used them. They are not going to come up with substantial issues in the last day or two of the election unless it might be some shoddy smear timed so that it can't be answered.

That's what happened in November. At the last minute a letter from three Marinites calling themselves Republicans was circulated, viciously attacking the Republican congressional candidate and erroneously implying Republican support for the letter's position. It was a masterpiece of deceit, mailed with such timing it was not even possible for the Republicans to get an answering news story in local newspapers before the election.

Another less successful attempt was a legal suit, filed in San Rafael by Democratic leaders against this newspaper at the last minute before the courts closed on Friday before the election. It was an attempt to censor publication of an advertisement. The fact that the ad existed nowhere but in the minds of a few straw-clutching publicity seekers, made the filing of the suit even more pitiful. Of course it was never pressed.

What it really all boils down to is this: If either side had any really good issue, it would have been trotted out and paraded up and down long before this. Any last-minute attack, slur, inference or rumor circulated by any means whatsoever in the last 48 hours of the campaign can be either taken with a great big grain of salt or, better still, ignored entirely. And this applies to campaign tactics of either side.

Don't let some last-minute political strategy cloud your vision, for that is all it's designed to do. It has no substance.

Reed Bonds Look Like Good Idea

Reed Union School District is having a bond election Tuesday in connection with the special congressional election. The residents are being asked to approve the issuing of $550,000 in bonds over the next five years and the borrowing of $2,370,000 from state building funds.

We've always enjoyed watching development of the schools system on the Tiburon peninsula, because it seems to us to be the most representative, most public-involved district we know of.

The current bond issue, for example, resulted from a citizen study. And it is designed not just for this year, but for several years ahead; authorizing bond sales as soon as the district's valuation can support their sale.

We have seen such a system work in the San Rafael district. It worked well. It looks like a good idea in the Reed district too.

But we're sure the people of the peninsula will make up their own minds.

Sometimes Military Intelligence Doesn't Tell All And Visa Versa

By CHAPIN A. DAY

Going through some of my notes, I came upon a talk given to state legislators by Col. Arthur Heron, an aide to Gen. Curtis LeMay. In it, he warned military intelligence service "feels there will be a Russian strike within 13 or 14 months." California is a prime target, Colonel Heron pointed out, and Russia "probably could move a couple hundred submarines off our coast and launch missiles inland to knock out our aircraft industry and research."

He warned there are only three passes through which we could escape over the Sierra and he urged the legislature to pass a resolution urging an increased appropriation for the Strategic Air Command "as a most urgent defense matter." He declared that waiting until March would be a "dangerous delay."

My notes are dated Feb. 3, 1958. Boy, that was a close one!

UP IN AIR AND DOWN AGAIN

Two young men in Tennessee got the ride of their lives when a big balloon tore loose from its moorings and soared 11,000 feet.

They were hired to man the balloon, which was being used for advertising purposes.

By the time they were able to halt the rapid climb and begin to descend, more troubles befell them.

The hot air balloon cooled too fast as they went through a cloud bank and they plunged to earth with the speed of a falling parachute.

The pair finally landed with their big craft in a tangle of telephone wires. Both were unhurt.

In these days of astronauts and "moon shots," it is more important than ever that man keeps a firm grip on the technical achievements he has devised.

Do all in your power however small, by prayer, word and deed to encourage sound values in all phases of science. In that way you will serve God and help save mankind.

In Polite Society They Don't Talk About Congress Staff Pay

By FRANK ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New members of Congress are learning a special brand of arithmetic.

A four-day school for the newcomers was organized by some of the more kindly veteran members of the House who were concerned that the neophytes might detract from august deliberations.

One of the main points the veterans impress on newer members is that figures do not always mean what they seem to say.

In addition to congressional arithmetic, however, the curriculum covers such things as the wisdom of keeping one's mouth closed until he has something to say; the impropriety of propping one's size 11's on the seat of a senator sitting in front; and the need to act at all times as if some of the home-folks were in the gallery watching—because they may be.

BUT THE FRESHMEN are most apt to be interested in learning why a congressman's $5,640-a-year secretary actually draws $12,792.

Or he could be confused about why an average House member's staff allowance of "$20,500 basic per annum" really means he can affix to the public payroll up to nine persons whose actual annual pay will be something in the neighborhood of $50,000.

For the 67 congressmen who took their House seat for the first time, a lawmaker's payroll may have seemed modestly plump.

But it should not take long for the new member to grasp a significant fact: the payroll can be considerably fatter than he thought. Without help, however, he might never figure out why and how it all works.

A typical problem might be:

How much is paid to a congressman's clerk whose salary is listed at $3,000?

Any member of the class who thinks this is like asking "who's buried in Grant's Tomb" obviously is behind in his home work. Because the answer is $7,255.

Or say the newly-elected congressman brings to Washington a girl Friday type who, on his private payroll back home, was happy to draw $5,000 a year. Now that the taxpayers are to pick up the tab, he wants to give her a modest raise to about $6,000.

So he puts her on the House payroll for $2,460; and she draws monthly checks totaling $6,085 yearly.

THE OFFICIAL figure is "base." The actual figure is "gross." And in polite conversation in Capitol Hill the new member learns that is just the way it is treated. In other words, it isn't generally mentioned.

"Base" is where Congress started, back in 1929, in fixing the pay scale of its helpers. Ten times since then has the pay been raised. Sometimes a percentage has been added, sometimes a flat sum, like $330 a year. The base

Another Deputy DA Resigning To Hang Up His Own Shingle

It's not official yet, but just about definite. P. Roy Vallarino is leaving the district attorney's staff about the end of February.

But the county won't be losing Roy and his pretty wife, Vivian. Vallarino will merely walk out of the courthouse and hang up his shingle a block away—with the John Buresh legal firm.

WHO IS THE county employee (in the higher pay bracket at that) who reportedly makes it a habit of mailing out personal letters without buying stamps?

Rumor is that these letters go out via the county stamping machine.

HERE'S LOYALTY for you. A woman shows up in the courthouse and waits all afternoon in criminal court. The judge calls out her husband's name, but no husband.

She gets up apologetically to assure the judge: "He said he'll be here. Your Honor, and I'm sure he will."

But to make doubly sure, she offered to have herself locked up in the county jail downstairs until her husband arrived.

AND THEN there are other types of people.

Just a few weeks ago, a man and his wife were locked up together for disturbing the peace. The man posted bail and walked out of his cell, bidding cheerful adieu to his wife, still behind bars.

Which reminds us of the woman who was caught drunken driving a few years ago. Inside her car was her pet dog. Both were jailed, and police notified the husband that his wife and dog were in custody. A few minutes later, the husband came rushing in—to bail out her dog.

THE MARIN sheriff's pistol team, three-time state champs, may be going for bigger stakes.

They're eyeing the national meet, scheduled for June in Indiana.

TWO PROMINENT Democrats, having coffee with two Republicans, were willing to make a bet on their Demo candidate in next Tuesday's election.

But a witness swears that the Demos were asking a handicap of several thousand votes.

IN THE Congressional race, we'd say Republican Don Clausen has the edge. He's had a longer time to campaign, and has probably received more exposure to the public eye.

And Democrats William Grader and John Stuart will have to share the Demo votes.

U.S. Economy Must Be Made To Work At Or Near Its Capacity

WASHINGTON — Tax reduction first became a big public issue after the break in the stock market last May. At that time, the indicators which economists use to make their predictions were pointing downward.

To avert the threatened recession, a quick tax cut was much talked about. But while the President was interested, he found that, last summer, Congress would not vote a tax cut before it adjourned. At about the same time, the statistical indicators began to be less gloomy.

THE EFFECTS of this experience are to be seen in the President's message on the State of the Union. Whereas, last summer, he decided against a quick tax cut because Congress would not vote it, now he is making tax reduction and tax reform the paramount business before Congress.

The significant fact about all this is that, though the pressing reasons advanced last summer for a tax cut do not at present exist, the President has committed himself more deeply than ever to tax reduction and tax reform. What had been talked about originally as a remedy for the emergency of a recession has now become, in the absence of a recession, a proposal for a permanent fiscal policy.

THIS EVOLUTION in the philosophy of the tax proposals is highly significant and also, it seems to me, constructive and sound. The problem that has to be solved is not how to prime the pump when the business cycle turns downward, but how to cure what has come to be a chronic sluggishness in the American economy.

The administration tax program is addressed to the problem of chronic sluggishness. The program is based on the conclusion that our present tax rates and tax structure are undoubtedly the prime, even if they are not the only, depressant on economic growth.

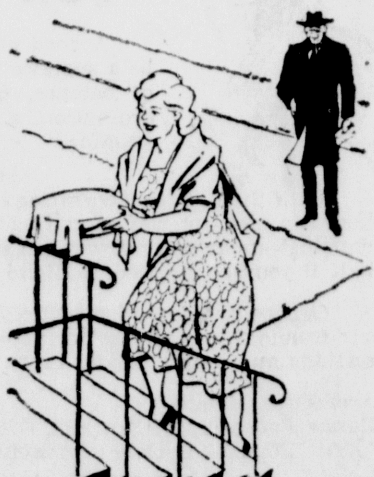

The tax system is a patchwork put together during the wars of this century and the social struggles of preceding generations. This tax system must be remodeled to serve the kind of economy that we have today.

THE PRESIDENT is proposing a tax program which confides the task of expanding the economy and stimulating growth to private enterprise—to private consumers, employers and investors—and there is good reason to believe that it will work.

But, as the President points out with clarity and candor, tax reduction and tax reform are not the only conceivable methods of promoting economic growth. There is an alternative method, which he rejects. This would be "a massive increase in federal spending."

It is a necessary reminder. The choice before Congress is not between the tax program on the one hand and on the other a contented and complacent sluggishness. One way or another the economy be made to work at or at least near full capacity.

Grader Wants Congress Job To Carry On For Miller

The real issue facing Marin County voters on Tuesday is whether the First Congressional District wants to go ahead with a program of progress begun by the late Rep. Clem Miller or "slip back under ineffective congressional leadership."

That is the contention of William F. Grader of Fort Bragg, Democratic candidate.

"The reason I'm running for Congress is that I have worked with and know the problems and their opposition. I've worked with Clem on them for four years; I've helped write some of the laws and helped move them ahead," he went on. "If we don't move ahead, we're going to have real problems ahead in harbors, hospitals, schools, roads and protecting the scenic values of the district."

"I have no illusions about what Congress is all about. I know it's no picnic but hard work. But also I know how to get the job done. I have worked with all the agencies, federal, state and local. As part of Miller's staff I've helped on practically every one of the problems facing us."

"And one thing more," Grader continued, "we have a Democratic administration, a Democratic Senate, House — I have the key to the door, but my opponent does not. I can do a better job in Washington for this district."

Grader, 45, was born in Coalgate, Okla., of rancher parents but moved to the Pacific Northwest when he was a boy. When he was 15 and still in Broadway High School, Seattle, he convinced the city editor on the Seattle Star that he was 20 and went to work as a reporter. He continued as a reporter on the Star and the Seattle Post-Intelligencer while he went to the University of Washington. He graduated with a major in political science.

Then he went to work as a supervisor in Todd Shipbuilding Corp., a business which was expanding as the year was 1939. He stayed there until late in 1945.

In 1946 he fell in love and married Geraldine Giarde of Bellingham, Wash. He became owner-operator of a wholesale grocery, then purchasing a sporting goods firm in Bellingham and Mt. Vernon, Wash.

But in 1950, Grader and his wife, Gerry, moved to Fort Bragg and began to operate the Grader Fish Co., a fish processing plant. He recalls it this way:

"We had it all figured out. We would work just during the five months of fish season. The rest of the time we'd just have a time, traveling to Mexico and that sort of stuff." But it didn't work out that way. "We found that even the best place to live has needs — needs for schools, for roads and other things. And our lives became involved."

"Zeke, that's William Jr., was 3 when we moved to Fort Bragg and Lindsay was 1. Then along came Allison, and Sam a year after that. No long trip to Mexico."

Keeping his fish plant in operation, Grader became editor of the Paul Bunyan News, a weekly newspaper published by the local theater owner. He was doing that when he met Clem Miller.

"I saw a man of great feeling in Clem Miller and I wanted to become part of it," Grader recalls. "I have shared a great experience."

He became Miller's field representative, a job he still holds although he says he is "sending my pay checks right back to the U.S. Treasury until after election."

Now he wants to carry on where Miller left off.

"The scenic values along our coast, the beaches, the coves and the cliffs, they belong to all the people of the nation, they're not just ours. But we must protect them. We can't let the highway people in building new roads destroy the very thing people are using the roads to reach."

He went to San Diego and appeared before the State Highway Commission to help block planning for a scenic freeway from Southern Marin to Stinson Beach and Olema.

Then he proposed a three-point scenic highway program in which the federal government would help finance scenic roads in the states, help link up state and national parks with a federal parkway system, and expand the existing regulations on billboards along federal highways so that they can be made effective.

The "greatest single thing" the Congress has done, "probably the most significant piece of legislation developed in years," is the Trade Expansion Act, Grader believes. And the most significant problem facing the First District is development of its recreational areas.

Development of the recreational areas, including scenic highways, state and federal parks, recreational water areas, fishing and conservation of the trees and natural resources is the single most pressing local challenge, he believes.

But there are many more, and here are his positions on them:

TAX CUT — Supports the president's plan for federal income tax reduction and urges a special provision giving businessmen an opportunity to set aside tax-free funds for expansion.

EDUCATION — Favors general aid to education from the federal government. "The federal government should do it because the nation has changed," he said. Once 80 per cent of the nation's wealth was in land, now only 20 per cent.

He declared junior colleges are vital to the nation and the Redwood Empire in particular.

JOBS AND JOBLESS — Favors vigorous programs to revitalize and diversify the fishing and lumbering industries, expand recreational opportunities, develop natural resources, improve harbors, and promote tourism.

CONSERVATION AND WATER — Gives top priority to the $11 million, 5-year salmon restoration program of hatcheries, spawning channels, fish ladders and screens and restocking to benefit both sports and commercial fishermen.

Would establish the King Range national conservation area in Humboldt and Mendocino counties, the Cow Mountain conservation area, a North Coast marine science center at Tiburon Naval Net Depot, construct the English Ridge Dam on the Eel River and Dry Creek dam near Healdsburg to assure adequate water supplies.

Full development of the Eel River complex is possible for water, power, recreational and wildlife purposes all through sale of surplus water, he declared.

MEDICAL CARE FOR THE AGED — Favors Medicare, although "I don't care who does it." It "appears social security is the most logical agency to operate such an insurance program, but it might be Blue Cross or a private company. I don't care just so it is done fully and at a reasonable cost."

YOUTH — The Youth Conservation Corps, the Youth Training Act and the Domestic Peace Corps are all one package aimed at those who are floundering because of a shortage of suitable jobs and a lack of education. Schooling should be offered through these programs, he believes.

AGRICULTURE — Farmers should be "allowed to govern the destinies of their own crops through supply-management programs." Such programs will save family sized farms, he believes, and without them they "will be all gathered up in absolute monopolies. Then who will set the prices?"

He also believes subdivisions "must stop encroaching" on farms, taking all of the level land.

MENTAL HEALTH — Need is for "a bold, new mental program" similar to one introduced by Miller, in which small institutions are located in local communities where patients are closer to home and better out-service care can be given. He believes this would substantially reduce the cost of mental health care.

HIGHWAYS — State Highway 101 should be put into the federal system.

There must be at least two lateral highways serving the new Point Reyes Park. The lateral to come into the park from the east is most important. Its location should be determined and then the routing set for the Shoreline Highway.

IN MARIN COUNTY the major unfinished job is obtaining money for development of Point Reyes. However, work must be done to get authorization of Bolinas harbor of refuge and the dredging of Richardson Bay to Mill Valley. In addition, appropriations are needed to start the new $6.8 million Corte Madera Creek flood control project and complete the survey on Coyote Creek in Tamalpais Valley.

ed to start the new $6.8 million Corte Madera Creek flood control project and complete the survey on Coyote Creek in Tamalpais Valley.

NATIONALLY AND INTERNATIONALLY: Red China shouldn't be admitted to the United Nations at present, but we better start thinking about 700 million hungry Chinese; the House Un-American Activities Committee should be eliminated and its duties taken over by the Judicial Committee; our Disarmament Agency must be strengthened and we must develop a blueprint for change-over from war to peace economy; Food for Peace, Peace Corps, Alliance For Progress and the Student Exchange Program should be expanded, but the bulk of our budget must still go for defense and space activities because of the threat of thermonuclear war.

Clausen Thinks Local Government Is Most Important

"There is basically one major difference between me and my opponent for Congress," declared Donald H. Clausen of Crescent City, the Republican candidate in Tuesday's special First Congressional District election. "He wants big government in Washington; I want stronger local government."

"We agree almost unanimously on the need for public works projects, the necessity of immediate development of Point Reyes National Seashore, of land management, conservation responsibilities, water needs and the Eel River development in their solution," Clausen went on. "But I want to confine my activities as a congressman to areas of recognized federal responsibility, to let states handle affairs clearly theirs."

"This is possible, and the need for increasing federal handouts diminishes, if tax revisions are made which would return some of the tax sources to local governments."

The 39-year-old candidate has for seven years been a supervisor in a county (Del Norte) where more than three quarters of the property is in federal and state ownership and so off the tax-rolls.

"If the federal government would give back, say, just the excise tax to the states and counties," he went on, "we could handle our own local problems and allow Congress to be free of internal chores so that it could devote the major portion of its time to its own responsibility, leading the free world in a peace race."

Clausen was serious; his usually smiling face was grave as he talked.

"This has been a difficult campaign for me," he went on. "Early in the campaign we realized that we faced apathy on the part of the voters. This special election was so close to the November election, with the holidays in between, that people wouldn't be in the mood for politics."

"Our decision was to try to have me meet and personally talk to as many people as I possibly could. In this limited time, actually we've had less than three weeks of campaigning since New Year's Day, we couldn't do everything. So we decided to meet people in small, informal groups where we could talk and they could get to know me, rather than stage big formal meetings where I was little more than a name in the program."

Clausen is a native of the district. Born in Ferndale, Humboldt County, he was raised and educated in the Ferndale-Eureka area until he went to San Jose State College. There he became a member of the Navy's V-5 program and found himself to be a carrier pilot in the Asiatic-Pacific theater during World War II.

He also took college training at California Polytechnic and St. Mary's in California and at Weber College in Ogden, Utah.

He started his business career with three years with the Bank of America, then became manager-operator of the Del Norte County airport for eight years.

He went into the insurance business, opening his own office of Clausen Associates in Crescent City. But he continued his flying. He started the Clausen Flying Service, an air ambulance and served as a flight instructor and a CAA examiner.

Seven years ago, with vice and corruption commonplace in Del Norte County, Clausen was a leader in a reform drive and as such was elected to the board of supervisors. He is now nearing the end of his second term, "with the reform job accomplished," and has served as chairman of the county board, president of the supervisors unit of the Redwood Empire Association, vice chairman of the aviation unit of the state supervisors organization, and active in other governmental groups.

Because his air ambulance and insurance business both kept him traveling extensively by air, he became known as the "flying supervisor."

"There's hardly a part of these six counties I don't know from first hand knowledge," Clausen declared. "I've been all over them. There isn't a man, certainly none running for Congress, who knows the district as I do."

Because of his particular interest in youth, he developed what has become a widely copied feature of the Del Norte County High School curriculum. In a county which has no trains and few highways, but great distances, he was a co-founder and advisor to an aviation education program conducted right on the county airport.

In all this activity he found time to woo his wife, Ollie, and they have two daughters, Beverly, 17, and Dawn Marie, 12.

It has been through his wife's church work that Clausen became interested in missionary work in the interior of Mexico. He has flown missionaries, supplies, doctors and dentists into remote areas of our southern neighbors to establish clinics and schools. He has had a real part in the person-to-person portion of our foreign aid programs.

What kind of a legislative program would such a congressman carry on? Here are some of his positions:

GOVERNMENT — Keep the government as close to the people as possible. If the federal government is going to take over agriculture, the schools, highways and other local problems, there will be no room or money for state governments.

On the other hand, if federal and state government would revise their tax structures so as to leave sources for local operations, "it would be possible, as New York did for example, to increase aid to education 60 per cent in four years without the federal controls."

COMMUNISM — We must maintain a modern, well-trained, well-equipped fighting force to counter the external threat of Communism. We can not afford, however, to overlook the warnings of FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover that a small number of dedicated hard-working Communists can present a serious internal threat.

"I do not believe that the House Un-American Activities Committee should seek to usurp the role of the FBI," said Clausen, "but responsible leaders in both political parties recognize that this committee has performed an outstanding service in alerting the public and law enforcement agencies to the activities of Communist groups."

EMPLOYMENT — Jobs already existing in the First District must be protected and new jobs must be found for the rapidly growing area. Administration policies at present aren't geared to the district's economy.

"I intend to offset these job-destroying tendencies," Clausen declared, "to strengthen rather than weaken our basic industries. I pledge myself to work for a favorable climate for business and agriculture in the district and use my prestige as congressman to encourage and promote new industries beneficial to the district."

He proposes a "new method of financing" small businesses by broadening FHA rules so that the small businessman can get financial backing in the same way a small home owner does.

TAXES AND SPENDING — "I support President Kennedy's income tax cut proposals to the Congress to the extent that they will not increase the national debt. However, they should be a part of the general tax revision program."

Clausen said the real way to a balanced budget is to reduce federal spending as the first step. Confiscatory tax rates for both individuals and industries "destroy American jobs and must be avoided."

MEDICAL CARE FOR AGED — Clearly necessary, a medical care for the aged program should be better than offered by Medicare. Medicare would, for example, not pay any doctor bills, nor pay for any surgery, nor pay for medicines or drugs administered outside of the hospital, or for the first $90 of the hospital bill.

The Kerr-Mills approach through voluntary insurance is a much better concept, Clausen believes.

"In my experience both as a supervisor and through my air ambulance and insurance businesses, I have dealt closely with welfare programs and believe they should be set up on a responsible, insurance-like basis without compulsion. I am extremely interested in the Marin Medical Society's approach to the problem which, while originally giving aid to the aged, could be expanded into a practical medical care program for everyone."

EDUCATION — "I am fundamentally opposed to general federal aid to education." Some programs, such as when a federal agency, like Hamilton Field, puts an undue hardship on a school district, are needed and necessary, however. Also where matching funds are provided for educational improvements to benefit either teacher or student.

One of the most effective educational aids the federal government could offer the schools would be a revised federal tax structure which releases tax sources to the school districts and lets the local people who know them best, solve their own problems. Excise taxes alone took $13 billion dollars from local communities last year, funds which could be used for school purposes.

MENTAL HEALTH — Basically care of mental health problems is a state responsibility and should be assumed, as it has quite well been done in California, by the states.

AGRICULTURE — The proposed supply-management program in effect controls the farmers in their entire operation and puts them under government control with less choice of conducting a free enterprise operation. Farmers should have a free economy. The federal Trade Expansion Act, passed last year, was "a fine bill" necessary in today's world with the Common Market and problems of distributing food around the world. "But the California delegation must be vigilant to ward off unfair competition not only from the Common Market but from the U. S. government's trying to level off the nation's agricultural output at the expense of California and First District farmers."

NATIONALLY AND INTERNATIONALLY — A congressman is doing his best when he supports the administration at times and becomes "responsible opposition" at other times. Clausen believes President Kennedy made the right decision to blockade Cuba, a contrast to a weak stand and subsequent events along the Berlin wall; aid must be continued to free nations, but foreign aid programs to Communist nations, like Yugoslavia, should be "ended immediately"; U. S. participation in the United Nations and NATO should continue, with other nations assuming more and more of the military costs of NATO and a wider recognition of basic freedoms in the UN; U. S. should not recognize Red China; we should show more initiative in enhancing the economy in the Western Hemisphere, but the Alliance For Progress needs revision regarding local participation; the Peace Corps should be expanded, but it must be careful not to adversely affect volunteer groups, such as missionaries, working in the same areas.

Stuart Is Unknown Who Didn't Try To Become Known

Least known, least seen and least active candidate for Congress in Tuesday's special election is John C. Stuart.

Stuart became a phantom to the newsmen, TV and radio men who tried to contact him, interview him, or just talk with him. He had no phone number and no address where he was available. The Novato address he gave the county clerk when he filed his nominating petition was a friend's residence. The friend doesn't have a telephone, either.

Nevertheless, Stuart received widespread publicity when Roger Kent, chairman of the Grader campaign, sued to try to keep him off the ballot. Kent charged one of Stuart's petition registrars was an ex-felon and therefore ineligible to serve.

Stuart fought back and a visiting Superior Court judge decided that even if some signatures were illegal, Stuart still had the required number and one more besides. His name stayed on the ballot—as a Democrat.

But resentment lingered. Throughout the campaign, whenever Stuart had the chance, he criticized "king-makers who try to run the elections."

But how widely Stuart has been able to tell his story and the reasons he should be elected is extremely questionable.

The Independent-Journal has carried no announcement of meetings he has addressed nor reports on them afterwards. He has made, then broken, appointments to be on radio and television. He has said he's "just going around talking with people."

Stuart has dropped some of his campaign folders in parked cars. The folders indicate something about the man. His home is in Auburn, Placer County, which is not in the district nor near it. He was born in St. Louis, Mo., was placed in an orphanage when he was three and his mother died, until his father had remarried. They moved to California when he was 12.

Now 52, Stuart has a wife and three children, a daughter, Rosalie, 23; son Donald, 14, and daughter Patricia Eleanor, 9.

He claims ability in business management, contracting (he did some home remodeling in Southern Marin a few years back), engineering and cost accounting. It is in this latter field that he has been most active in recent years.

For nearly the last 10 years, almost since the 1952 primary election, he has been a cost analyst, most of the time for the federal government. In that 1952 primary, he had his first try for Congress. That was in the Southgate area of Los Angeles. In a field of 11, he didn't run close.

Stuart tried for office again last year. He and two other fellows ran against Gov. Edmund G. Brown for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in June. Stuart was second of the four with 103,654 votes, only 2,816 of them in the First Congressional District.

Stuart bases his campaign on a seven-point platform. But more realistically, he bases everything on one main contention—government is taking too much freedom away from the individual.

Here they are:

1. The security of the American way of life must be preserved by making sure that "every law is scrutinized to see that it doesn't take freedom away from people." There is "too much infringement" today. This must be our major consideration.

2. The stability of our economic system is dependent on getting a dollar's worth of commodity or service for each dollar. As a cost analyst for the government for 7½ years, Stuart claims to have saved $3½ million in excess profits from federal contracts. He thinks this can be continued and taxes reduced as a result.

But a balanced budget is a

necessity "as in any sound economic system."

3. The "return of all freedoms to the people" is essential. But he won't specify even one "lost" freedom which should be returned: "My opponents would just make an issue of it."

4. Security for the aged should be a "substantial living pension" with flexible provisions which allow it to rise as inflation does. "We could finance it by giving less money to foreign governments and taking care of our own people at home."

5. Labor should have the right to settle its own disagreements with management without governmental interference, except in a national emergency. But this applies to individual laborers only, not unions. Nor should the government act as negotiator between a union and management. Instead there should be a National Negotiating Committee, elected nationwide to arbitrate strikes.

6. Veterans deserve equalized rewards for their services to their country, not empty promises. The government was responsible for the men going to war and it should reward them. All pensions should be equalized and a federal bonus paid to all veterans of all wars.

7. The tax burden must be reduced and "I promise to fight to the best of my ability to keep the tax spiral from rising and, whenever possible, to endeavor to reduce them by economic, efficient operation of government."

Standing on this platform Stuart asks for help. He says he will "seek the wishes of the people and act as they wish, not as I wish."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Diamonds Are Not Always Girl's Best Friend In Game

Don't be tempted by a sparkling sequence of honors. If the bidding shrieks for a trump lead, listen and obey.

If West opens a trump, she can lead another trump when she gets in with the king of hearts.

That takes both trumps out of dummy, and West gets three hearts instead of only two.

"A Pocket Guide to Bridge," send 50¢ to Bridge Book, Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael.

South dealer		North-South vulnerable
NORTH		EAST
♠ 9	♠ 5	♠ 3	♠ 2
♥ 6 4 2	♥ 7 2	♥ 8 7	♥ 10 5
♦ A Q 8 7 3	♦ K J 9 4 2	♦ K 8 7	♦ K J 9 4 2
♣ 10 5	♣ 6	♣ 10 5	♣ 6

West was led astray by those glittering diamonds, like many a poor girl. She led the queen of diamonds, and that was the end of her.

IN DUMMY

Declarer won in dummy with the ace of diamonds and lost a heart finesse to the king. Now West shifted to a trump, but it was too late.

Declarer won the trump return with the queen, cashed the ace of hearts, and ruffed a heart in dummy.

South took dummy's ace of clubs, ruffed a club, drew trumps, and gave up a trick to the jack of hearts.

LOOK AHEAD

South still had a trump and the last heart to assure his contract. He lost only two hearts and one diamond.

West should listen to the bidding and look ahead. Clearly, dummy will show up with two spades and two hearts.

West must lead a trump to prevent a heart ruff in dummy. If North had three spades, he would raise spades instead of bidding notrump.

PREFER HEARTS

If North had three hearts, he would prefer hearts to spades.

If North had a singleton, he wouldn't bid notrump.

The bidding shows North's exact distribution and shrieks for a trump lead.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Jan. 19, the 19th day of the 1963 with 346 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1861, Georgia seceded from the Union during the beginning of what was to become the Civil War.

In 1937, Howard Hughes broke a record by flying across the United States in seven hours, 28 minutes, 25 seconds.

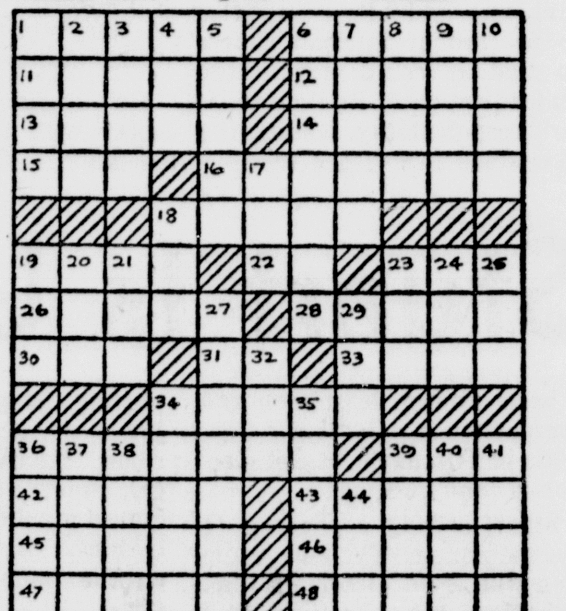

A thought for the day—Abraham Lincoln said: "I claim not to have controlled events, but confess plainly that events have controlled me."

Digging Holes Held Legitimate

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—The Bavaria State Supreme Court has ruled that digging holes in a public park is a legitimate form of protest.
The court canceled 50-mark fines ($12.50) levied against three men who were caught last year digging foxholes in Munich's downtown Maximilian Square. They said they were ridiculing a government pamphlet recommending ways to survive an atomic blast.
The court said criticism can be expressed by other means than words and that the men were only exercising their rights to express an opinion.

New Treatments For Paget Disease Are Use Of Florine, Plain Aspirin

Two new treatments for Paget's disease came to my attention during the last two months. This is the condition that afflicts many adults over 45 years of age leading to thickening and deformity of the bones of the skull, vertebrae, and the extremities.
Fluorine, of dental caries fame, is the first of these. This substance makes the teeth resistant to cavity formation when taken orally during the first decade of life. It also makes the bones, more resistant to Paget's disease. Consequently, older folk should benefit along with the youngsters from the addition of fluorides to the public water supply.

ASPIRIN is the second remedy. A group of researchers from Seton Hall College of Medicine, headed by Dr. Philip H. Henneman, found that large amounts of ordinary aspirin lessened the size of the enlarged bones. This household pain killer was used because of its similarity to cortisone. The latter made the diseased bones better but had an adverse effect upon the healthy bone. Aspirin works only on the abnormal structures by removing the excessive calcium in a harmless way.

In Paget's disease the bony tissue is alternately destroyed and replaced. During the period of destruction the bone is weakened and bends or bows when required to support the weight of the body. At this time there is a marked release of calcium from the kidneys. But when bone is subjected to this type of stress, the repair team is called in and new bone is laid down, which now becomes hard, thick, and deformed.

THE SPINE is involved in 90 per cent of those with Paget's disease. Many com-

Central California Going Through Worst Drought

By JAMES FORBES

FRESNO (AP)—Unless there is rain and snow soon, the future for the San Joaquin Valley is as bleak as the barren, snowless Sierra.

Central California is going through one of its worst droughts in its recorded history.

High mountain peaks stand stark and barren. A year ago they were covered by a deep mantle of snow.

Without any runoff from the Sierra, there will be little water from the Stanislaus, San Joaquin, Kings and Kern rivers which drain this vast and life-giving watershed.

To date, the seasonal rainfall on the valley floor would barely fill a thimble. Fresno has recorded just slightly over one inch of rain since July 1, and Bakersfield only one-quarter of an inch. Instead of mud on the valley floor, there is dust.

Little relief is in sight.

If heavy rains and snow fail to arrive in the so-called stormy months of February and March, the prospects are almost disastrous for farmers, resort operators and foresters.

Some farmers face the expensive prospect of having to sink their water wells deeper. In areas that depend solely on surface water for irrigation—as Stanislaus, Merced, parts of Fresno, Kings and Tulare counties—the drought could mean almost certain disaster.

Marinwood Owners Ask Speed Curb

A petition asking tougher enforcement of the speed limit on Miller Creek Road in Marinwood was presented to the Marinwood Community Services District board Thursday night.

The petition, signed by 111 residents along the road, was presented by Dean Swanson of 595 Quietwood Drive and Henry Fuqua of 599 Miller Creek Road. They asked that stop signs be put up at intervals to encourage observance of the 25-mile speed limit.

CSD president Howard Council said the petition would be referred to the county board of supervisors.

The board agreed to consider addition of three street lights on Lucas Valley Road at the entrance to Marinwood. Recommendations for the lights have been received from Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

The board adjourned until Feb. 7 at 8 p.m. in the Mary E. Silveira School when detailed plans for the community center will be disclosed with architect Roger F. Hooper of Ross.

'Lo And Behold' Rehearsals On

Rehearsals have begun for the comedy, "Lo and Behold," which will open Feb. 8 in the Terra Linda Community Center.

Production of the play by John Patrick is by the Terra Linda Little Theater and is under direction of Janice Fisher.

Mrs. Martin Katzman, president of the group, said there are openings for several character parts in the play.

The comedy will be presented also on Feb. 9 and 16. Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m.

School Unit Meeting

The Marin County Committee on School District Organization will meet at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Civic Center to plan its Feb. 20 meeting, when alternative proposals for the Tamalpais High School District will be presented.

In the mountains, ski resorts are in a financial bind and even a blizzard now would be of little help. Ski resorts rely heavily on Christmas vacation patronage — which was nonexistent this season.

And summer mountain resorts could have a bleak season. Historically, when mountain lakes, reservoirs and streams are low, fewer people visit them. Fish life vanishes.

If the drought continues, foresters say fire danger will be extreme. Grazing will be affected both for cattle and deer herds. Natural regeneration of timber will be practically nil.

Already the dry forests are being attacked by bark beetles and the moisture-starved pines have little ability to cope with this destructive insect pest.

There's just one sight Central California wants now, and that is rain and snow.

Sleepy Hollow Owners Elect

Vern P. Smith, last year's vice president of Sleepy Hollow Home Owners Assn., was elected president at a meeting of directors Thursday night at the association clubhouse on Butterfield Road.

Roland Hauck, who has been a director, was elected vice president. Walter Shau was elected to a one-year term as director to fill the place vacated by Hauck.

Others elected included Mrs. Thekla Dechant, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Joan Furlong, recording secretary; George El. Ligeroth, treasurer; and Hutton Theller, Jack Podosta and Owen Merritt as new directors for two-year terms.

Native Sons Plan To Install Monday

William Barnes of San Rafael will be installed president of Mount Tamalpais Parlor 64 of the Native Sons of the Golden West at the Portuguese-American Hall in San Rafael at 8:30 p.m. Monday.

Other officers to be sworn in are William Wider, first vice president; Merle Mazza, second vice president; Les Wider, third vice president; Ed Lawrence, marshal; Al Ferrari, outside sentinel; and Jack Lake-man, inside sentinel.

Marin Construction: $70,921,667

Marin County totaled a record $70,921,667 in construction authorizations last year, according to a report released today by the Marin County Development Assn.

Residential construction led, particularly in apartments, with a total of 3,790 dwelling units — 30.4 per cent above the previous high of 2,906 units in 1955.

'Government Week' Set At School

Noon-hour debates between student body officer candidates will be a feature of "Government Week" at Terra Linda High School, which will begin Jan. 28.

Students who wish to run for school offices are now circulating petitions, which must be completed Monday, said Principal Webster Wilson. The student body election will be held Feb. 1, to be preceded by a candidates' assembly Jan. 31.

"During the first three days of Government Week we will have debates between candidates to inform the whole student body of what is going on," said Wilson. "The meetings should arouse a greater interest in student government as well as let the candidates know what their jobs will be, if elected."

Sophomore Steve Frazini and fellow class members will be in charge of Government Week activities.

In Basic Training

Pvt. Michael W. McGarr, 18, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton C. McGarr, 5 Oak Springs Drive, San Anselmo, is taking Army basic training at Fort Ord. He is a 1962 graduate of Drake High School and worked as a salesman in San Rafael prior to entering the service.

Comparison of total dwelling units authorized last year and in 1961 shows a rise of 39.9 per cent in the year.

Commercial construction in Marin County showed a drop of 6.6 per cent last year as compared with the year previous, according to the report. But it showed marked improvement during the last third of the year after languishing during the first eight months.

All other classes of construction including alterations, repairs, public buildings and pools rose 15.1 per cent in number of permits, but they were down 41.8 per cent in value, much of the decline occurring in public buildings.

During last year 266 swimming pools were constructed in the county.

San Rafael led all other areas in value of authorizations with a total of $17,705,407. Novato area, including both city and unincorporated adjacent territory, came next with $9,890,698.

The Tiburon Peninsula excluding Belvedere totaled $7,027,819. Mill Valley and adjacent unincorporated area totaled $6,622,601. Corte Madera had $4,303,626 and Larkspur $4,290,257.

A record $4,600,993 was established for the county during the usually low month of December.

The Many Talents Of Cesare Claudio

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Symphony conductor, judo expert and all-around athlete, educator and former counter espionage agent — these are just some of the facets of the widely disparate talents and experiences of Cesare Claudio.

Claudio, who lives in Kentfield, has been a music supervisor for Sausalito schools since 1959 and is presently devoting a major part of his energies to organizing a benefit concert to buy musical instruments for Sausalito schools.

The concert is to be presented on Feb. 15 at Redwood High School by 60 members of the San Francisco Symphony under the auspices of the Edgewater Foundation of Sausalito. This is a non-profit organization, founded specifically to promote this concert and possibly others in the future.

OF ALL HIS musical activities, which include playing the cello, composing and teaching, Claudio prefers conducting.

A member of the San Francisco Symphony from 1936 to 1951 under Pierre Monteux, he has continued to study under the maestro in a master class Monteux conducts every summer in Maine. Claudio was selected by Monteux as one of 15 conductors from North America to conduct in the concert hall he had built at Hancock, Maine.

Claudio is especially proud of being the founder and director of the Claudio Symphony Orchestra, started in 1945 as an outlet for musicians who desired to play great music. He also founded and directs the California Chamber Symphony of 16 strings, which plays at social events in the Bay Area.

Cesare is the second of three sons born to Elisa and Ernest Claudio, a graduate of the Royal Conservatory of Naples and renowned concert violinist until his death. The other sons are Ferdinand and Silvio, both well known violinists with the San Francisco Symphony and Opera, who play in the Claudio Symphony. A sister is professional pianist Mary Chupp of Berkeley.

"I was born on May 29, 1915, in Victoria, British Columbia, when the family was forced to remain there when World War I started," he said. "Father had come to Canada with the Scotti Opera Company, of which the famed tenor Caruso was a member.

"AFTER LEAVING Canada the family lived in Seattle for a time and then settled in San Francisco in the 1920s, where I graduated from Balboa High School.

"After studying under my father for some years, I became a student of Willem Dehe, principal cellist of the San Francisco Symphony, and then went on to become a member of the symphony myself," said Claudio.

During the years 1937-39 he studied cello, composition and conducting — the latter with the noted Bernardino Molinari — at St. Cecilia's Academy of Music in Rome, the Benedetto San Marcello Conservatory in Venice and was graduated from the Cherubini Conservatory in Florence in 1939. At St. Cecilia's he won the coveted "Prix de Rome."

Returning to San Francisco, he resumed playing with the San Francisco Symphony and became a member of the San Francisco Opera Orchestra also, performing with them until 1951, except during his service with the U.S. Army from 1942 to 1945.

In 1942 he had also been head of the string department of Dominican College in San Rafael.

A WHOLE NEW world of interests and adventures opened to the musician when he was called into service with the U.S. Army in World War II.

CONDUCTING is the favorite musical activity of Cesare Claudio of Kentfield, music supervisor for Sausalito schools and founder and director of his own Claudio Symphony Orchestra. He will conduct 60 members of the San Francisco Symphony in a benefit concert to buy instruments for Sausalito schools on Feb. 15 at Redwood High School.

Because of his linguistic talents — he speaks English, French and nine Italian dialects — as well as his athletic prowess, he was given batteries of tests similar to those now used in choosing astronauts and became a member of a five-man team assigned to counter espionage work, mainly in Italy.

"I remember one important mission," he said. "We had to pick up important documents before the U.S. Fifth Army arrived in Rome — we got there a half hour after Goering left.

"Another time we were sent after three Japanese spies who had had their faces changed by plastic surgery — we didn't find them. But we did succeed in tracking down a team of three German spies. We worked a great deal with the Italian underground partisans."

Even during his war service Claudio kept up his musical interest, organizing an all-service symphony in San Diego, and at one time writing and producing musical dramatic shows for GIs in Africa.

WOUNDED IN the right hand by shrapnel, Claudio was out of action for nine months and for a time was chief interpreter and translator at the U.S. embassy in Rome.

While he was in the Army he had heard so many massacres of "The Star Spangled Banner" — played and sung like a folk tune — that he wrote a new arrangement.

"It has been submitted to the Congress of the United States," he explained, "for consideration as the official version. It is strong and austere befitting the dignity of a great nation."

Following his release from military service Claudio decided to continue his academic education and become a music instructor and supervisor.

"I've always loved to work with people, especially kids," he said, "and I wanted to impart my musical experiences and enjoyment of them."

HE COMPLETED work on a Bachelor of Arts degree at the University of California in 1950 and on a Master of Arts degree at San Francisco State College in 1952, both with major in music. He also received his special secondary credentials in music at San Francisco State College.

In 1952 he began his career as an educator, teaching at various times in public schools at Twenty-nine Palms, Los Angeles, Hayward and Palo Alto and at the College of Notre Dame in Belmont.

At present he is completing work on a doctorate in music at the University of California in Berkeley, writing his thesis on "Music Education" and also working on the final draft of a book on the philosophy of music education.

But, no matter what his occupation of the moment, he is always conducting, playing the cello and composing.

His compositions include "The Joshua Tree," a tone poem for orchestra, of which the premiere performance was given at the First Presbyterian Church in Berkeley in 1958; "Memorial Day," a tone poem for orchestra dedicated to soldiers of American wars; and "Joaquin Murieta," a music drama based on the life of a legendary California bandit.

AN ARIA FROM the music drama included in the Feb. 15 concert will be the first per-

CESARE CLAUDIO, who is a composer and cellist as well as symphony conductor, holds a recording of his composition "The Joshua Tree," a tone poem for orchestra. His son Ernest is removing from the record player a recording of "Priscilla's Prayer," an aria from Claudio's music drama "Joaquin Murieta," based on the life of a legendary California bandit. Nancy Cronburg will sing the aria at the Feb. 15 concert Claudio and 60 members of the San Francisco Symphony will give as a benefit to purchase instruments for Sausalito schools. Listening to the music is Claudio's mother, Mrs. Elisa Claudio. (Independent-Journal photo)

ALTHOUGH HE IS a distinguished musician and educator, Cesare Claudio is also a highly-trained athlete who believes in "a sound mind in a sound body." He is shown demonstrating a fall with Ed Marshall, judo instructor at the Marin School of Self Defense in Larkspur where Claudio works out regularly. Marshall wears a black belt indicating top skill in judo—Claudio wears a brown belt, indicating the second degree, and his son Ernest has won the right to wear a green belt, denoting the third degree of skill. (Independent-Journal photo)

Profile Of A Marin Musician

formance of anything from this work.

"The Joshua Tree" was submitted about a month ago for consideration by the noted choreographer Balanchine as the basis for a new ballet.

Claudio is listed in "Who's Who in Music—International" and is a member of the National Assn. of American Conductors and Composers and an honorary member of Circolo Artistico, Turin, Italy. The latter is composed of some of the leading conductors in the world.

But despite his distinguished achievements in music and education, the 43-year-old conductor is no pallid esthete. For ever since he was a child, he has been interested in all sports.

"A sound mind in a sound body" has always been one of his constantly stressed goals. He believes music and sports are not unrelated.

"Music is the universal language," he declared. "Sports and music complement each other, and they have one thing in common—they develop man."

"We owe mental and physical fitness not only to ourselves but to our country, and music teaches discipline in these fields as well as sports."

CLAUDIO TRAINED himself through such sports as swimming, weight lifting, hiking and skiing with the Sierra Club, fencing and practice of judo.

He holds Red Cross life-guard and water safety instructor cards, is a pool director for the Red Cross in San Rafael and swims regularly about twice a week at Boyes Springs or a recreational pool in North Beach.

He was a member of the former Fisconti Fencing Club in San Francisco and was a member of the judo team at the University of California.

He has won the right to wear a brown belt—indicating the second degree of proficiency in judo—and works out regularly about once a week at the Marin School of Self Defense in Larkspur, directed by Del Esposti.

Claudio lives with his mother at her home in Kentfield, and his five children live with their mother in Fremont. They are Ernest, 14; Curtis, 13; Antonia, 12; Victor, 8; and Dayton, 6. They visit him frequently and he often takes them skiing and swimming.

Not satisfied with being an athlete himself, he has also taught them—all of them, including Antonia—swimming, fencing and judo.

IN THE SUMMERS of 1956, 1957 and 1958 he and a partner had, first, the Rollicking Rangers Music Camp and then the Buckaroo Summer Music Camp, where youngsters, were, of course, taught judo, fencing and swimming, as well as arts, especially music, and crafts.

But right now that Feb. 15 concert is the all-important event in his life.

"We're hoping all music lovers in Marin County will turn out for our concert," he said. "I think they will enjoy it."

STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

Electricity has changed our way of life. It has made us more productive and at the same time provided us with more leisure time.

The field of electronics, a specialized phase of electricity, is moving so rapidly that the accomplishments seem unbelievable. Take one of our greatest achievements of 1961, FM Multiplex Stereo radio broadcasting, follow it through and you will see how miraculous our electronics progress really is. Assume that you and I are in an FM radio station studio. I am on the LEFT side of the studio and talking into a microphone. You are on the RIGHT side of the studio and talking into another microphone. The studio engineer controls our two voices, which have now been converted into minute amounts of electricity. The electronic equipment then combines your voice and mine and transmits the combined signal by FM broadcasting so that it can be received by any FM receiver that does not have a multiplex adapter and still hear you and I talking. At the same time, the electrons at the radio station continually subtracts your voice from my voice and this difference together with an electronic synchronizing tone, called a pilot carrier, is also transmitted over the same FM radio station. Those people who have an FM receiver with the multiplex unit can receive this combination of LEFT plus RIGHT microphone and LEFT minus right microphone voices and unscramble this combination so that my voice emerges only from the LEFT speaker, and your voice emerges only from the RIGHT speaker. Think of it, although our voices were added and subtracted and sent out over one radio station, and although the listener tuned in only one radio station, he was able to receive two completely separate sounds each sound coming from its own location, left or right.

The above is just one of millions of highly complex electronic achievements which we use and take for granted. For further proof of how remarkable electronics can be, visit us and listen to the FM Multiplex Stereo described.

BORN IN HOLLAND and a resident of that country until two and a half years ago, San Rafael artist and gallery owner Ben Steevens, nevertheless, prefers the Orien-

AN AMERICAN NOW

Artist From The Netherlands Paints In The Oriental Style

By DON KEOWN

Ben Steevens was born in Holland, and educated and trained in art there.

The first 22 years of his 25 years as a professional artist were spent in The Netherlands.

And as a Marinite for the last two and a half years, he has owned and operated The Dutch Art Gallery at 811 B Street.

IN VIEW OF that background, it comes as something of a jolt to learn that for the past 10 years Steevens has concentrated not upon the painting style of the old masters of his homeland, or even the more modern European and American schools, but upon Oriental art. This despite the fact he has never been closer to China or Japan than San Francisco's Chinatown.

Why this all-absorbing interest in Oriental painting?

"At first," answers Steevens, "I did all kinds of painting, as long as it was realistic. I was never interested in doing abstract art.

"But finally, I decided that Oriental painting was the most difficult and, at the same time, the kind of painting that gave me the greatest personal satisfaction. Consequently, for 10 years now, I have concentrated almost wholly upon it."

Steevens is especially fond of painting Chinese landscapes.

"The biggest challenge there is to capture the mystery of the rocks," he says. "The light is also difficult. And there must be a flow in the overall 'construction' of the painting."

TO HIS ORIENTAL paintings Steevens signs his name—in Chinese.

Steevens says that he and his wife, Cornelia, decided to take the drastic step of moving from Holland to the United States because a doctor advised them that the California climate would be good for their teen-age daughter, Marianne, who was then ailing. The Steevenses sold their home, their gallery and their art school (with an enrollment of 70 students) in The Hague and came to America. After scouting the West Coast, they decided upon San Rafael as the place which would become their new home. And Steevens opened the Dutch Art Gallery here.

The business handles art supplies, in addition to paintings, and also does custom framing.

It is, Steevens says, doing very well.

So well, in fact, that Steevens finds his own painting confined to the evenings and to Sundays.

"But I have sold 46 of my paintings during the past one and a half years we have been here," he says proudly. "That is better than I did in Holland."

STEEVENS SAYS his family is extremely happy in their new land. The daughter's health is much improved.

"If it were not for business, I would never go back to Europe," he says. "I would much rather use my time to become acquainted with the United States."

Marinites will have an opportunity to look at some of the Oriental paintings done by this Hollander who now regards himself as a 100 percent American when a one-man showing of his paintings opens Monday in the main office of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. Building at 1800 Second Street, San Rafael.

Steevens expects to have a half dozen or so of his paintings on display there for the next several weeks.

Their Favorite Breed: The German Shepherd

By LILLIAN McGOVERN

Twelve German Shepherds, "big bears" weighing an average of 90 pounds each, were gathered in the same hall, sitting on their haunches in orderly fashion.

The meeting lasted three hours, yet there were no dog fights, no barking.

The secret: This was the Superior California German Shepherd Dog Club, gathered for a general meeting in Cotati. The dogs were all American Kennel Club registered, some of them trained. Some had a CD rating (Companion Dog), others a CDX (Companion Dog Excellent), and a few were Utility Dogs, a sort of canine Ph.D.

THE GERMAN Shepherd has become very popular since the end of World War II.

In suburban areas such as Marin County, where large dogs can be kept in spacious backyards, many people have come to appreciate and own a German Shepherd. As the number of German Shepherd owners increased, there was a need for them to get to know each other — to exchange dog training tips and advice on the care and feeding of the German Shepherd. Thus these training clubs were started.

The club in Cotati meets at the Church of the Oaks Hall. Members come from the surrounding area, including San Rafael, Novato, Santa Rosa, Vallejo.

Husband and wife drop in at 7:30 p.m., their dogs with them on leash, and shop talk about the animals starts immediately.

"Rocky sure has grown a lot since last month."

EVERYBODY admires the dog Karen and Don Corbett from Marinwood have brought in, easily the biggest in the hall.

"You should still give him a pint of cottage cheese every day. Remember—he is still growing!" says Cappy Pottle, who owns Rocky's mother.

Cappy has come to the meeting with Golden Gwen. She has left seven German Shepherds at home. Cappy is also the editor and publisher of "The Western Shepherd Journal," a monthly magazine.

Mrs. Ron Nelson from Novato exclaims happily: "Satin won her second leg in Menlo Park last week!" A dog must win three "legs" to earn his CD.

President Bob Larsen and his wife Alice, from Santa Rosa, have brought a puppy and its mother, Famed Beauty. The puppy looks like a ball of black silk and, at eight weeks, is already two feet long.

THE COTATI club has a total of 25 members including several kennel owners. Cappy Pottle and Jean Stevens own the Tucker Hill Kennels in Cotati, Jane and Cleland Noah the Manzanita Kennels in Santa Rosa, and Betty Blodgett has the Arnwood Kennels in Petaluma.

Other Marin County members include Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Nelson from Terra Linda and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Alanzolo of Novato.

Club programs consist of explaining conformation of the breed with the aid of slides and knowledgeable speakers. Doug Bundock of Santa Rosa, one of the finest dog trainers in the country, works with the dogs one hour at the monthly gathering before the general meeting begins.

Doug has just spent a year training dogs for the Walt Disney production of "Little Dog Lost." His own pet Corgi, Candy, was the star in the TV show.

"It is difficult to get dogs for the movies," says Doug, "and the studios are always looking. If you own a dog that is trained and photogenic, let the studios know about it."

EACH DOG will react to certain situations better than another, he adds. One can act frightened on command, while another excels in tracking. As a result more than one dog is needed for the same part in a movie picture. As many as seven Collies are sometimes used for the part of Lassie.

Unfortunately, says Doug, it is difficult for a German Shepherd owner to get a Hollywood job for his dog since the public will always identify it as Rin Tin Tin.

"But if your dog has some distinguishing coloring and is not black (black shows only in silhouette on the screen), it could be used in movies," advises Doug.

A dog's life in the studios is not easy by any means, he cautions. The lights are very hot and make him pant, and the same scene has to be repeated many times.

"One scene," Doug recalls, "had to be repeated 49 times. An old Chesapeake Retriever had to hold a slipper in his mouth and drop it on signal. He was deaf, half blind and had been taught for 15 years not to drop anything he held in his mouth. It took 49 tries to forget the training of a lifetime."

In spite of the discomfort and hard work, dogs enjoy the excitement and the attention they are given in a movie production. When the cameraman is ready and calls "Stand by!," the trainer has a difficult time keep the dogs on leash.

DOUG BELIEVES that dog training can start as early as eight weeks.

"Call his name when you give him his food and at the same time make a hand signal so that he learns to come by your signals. Teach him to wear a collar."

DANTE MARCOLINA has special reason to be proud of his new home at 40 Hillside Avenue in San Rafael. He served as his own contractor and did all the masonry. The siding is half board, half brick. The shingles are cedar. And the home contains 2,100 square feet of floor space. Most of the landscaping remains to be done, but the Marcolinas can already enjoy a refreshing view of wooded hillside.

THIS LARGE AND HANDSOME fireplace serves as a focal point in the Dante Marcolina home. It is also evidence of Marcolina's skill as a bricklayer, since he did his own masonry work. Daughter Lynn, 5, reads in the spacious living room while in the background Mrs. Marcolina can be seen at work in her kitchen with son Paul, 2, looking on. (Independent-Journal photos)

A Bricklayer Turns Contractor

By RICHARD LYTTLE

Dante Marcolina, a bricklayer, stood proudly before his new home at 40 Hillside Avenue, San Rafael, and shook his head.

"No," he said, "I wouldn't try it again."

He was his own contractor and did all the masonry on the three-bedroom home. At the same time he continued his regular work with A. E. Pedrolini Inc. in San Anselmo. The construction of his home took six months.

"IT WAS A headache," he said. But he figures he saved the 10 per cent he would have had to pay a general contractor. This saving was put right back into the house for extra things that he and his wife, Doris, wanted.

The house has cedar shingles, half board and half brick siding, terrazzo and cork flooring, a sunken living room and a fine view of a wooded hillside.

Marcolina has not figured all his costs yet, but he thinks the basic construction of the 2,100 square foot house will come out at about $10.50 a foot.

The Marcolinas and their two children, Lynn, 5 and Paul, 2, moved into the house on Thanksgiving. On Dec. 29 they had an open house for all the friends and sub-contractors who had helped him.

"THERE WERE about 40 people here," Marcolina said. "I did not realize so many had helped us."

He still has most of the landscaping to do and figures it will take about a year to fix things up the way he wants them.

Mrs. Marcolina, who was keeping house in a three-room apartment just before the move, said it took her almost a month to get used to their new home.

"It seems so big," she said.

RELAXING BEFORE the fireplace which separates the living and family rooms of their new home at 40 Hillside Avenue, San Rafael, are Mrs. Dante Marcolina and daughter Lynn.

"Realty Ramblings"

Not long ago I was talking to one of our promising young high school students, who was interested in the realty business.

He asked me this good question, "Just who is your client—the person whose property is sold, or the person who buys it?"

I honestly answered him with one word—"Both."

To help clear his mind a little we looked in the dictionary for the definition of the word "Client"—"A person who resorts to another for business or professional service."

"Now take the position of the Seller", I told him. "He looks to me to produce a sincere buyer who qualifies in financial and moral credibility. He expects me to treat him fairly and to consummate a transaction in a manner in which he can be justly proud. As my client then, it becomes my obligation to serve him well."

"On the other hand, let us consider the Buyer. He needs counsel that will assure him of honest and forthright dealing; counsel in which he can be confident that his best interests are being served. He expects me to treat him just that way; so, he also becomes my client, and, again it becomes my obligation to serve him well."

"That we have been successful in this two-fold endeavor is proven by the many clients, both buyers and sellers, who continually return to us with their property problems. Our purpose here is to help solve them."

Modern Library Is School Hub

It's More Than Books And Shelves

A room with adequate space to house the books on hand and to hold a few study tables was, once upon a time, thought sufficient for a school library.

An instructional center with pleasant surroundings to enhance the education of students and serve teachers in selection, organization, interpretation, and use of materials: That's the goal of modern school libraries.

Tamalpais Union High School District libraries come as close to reaching that ideal as any in California, its administrators believe. Allowing for differences in enrollment and facilities, the libraries at Sir Francis Drake, Tamalpais, and Redwood high schools have identical purposes, functions, and services. The district maintains a uniform library philosophy and operation, according to Supt. Chester G. Carlisle.

DRAKE'S LIBRARY is bright and airy, and it grows and changes as need dictates. It was designed for Drake's maximum of 1,500 students and is headed by Mrs. Ruth Taylor.

Tam's new library was expanded and modernized as part of the 1961 bond issue. Outdated, overcrowded facilities have become roomy, modern, and pleasant and will ultimately serve 1,800 students. Its head is Mrs. Sidney Thompson.

Redwood's library is complete, physically, for the expected ultimate enrollment of 3,000. Its construction was also part of the recent bond election. The library opened for business this fall.

Redwood, with its size and newness, is the most striking example of the Tam District's emphasis on libraries.

While much needs to be done, the Redwood library is well on its way toward that kind of modern library which operates as the hub of daily instruction. Already more students and teachers gravitate toward the library, head

THE MAIN READING ROOM of the Redwood High School library is walled by large glass panels, thus making the interior light and airy. This full use of the available natural light has increased the library's appeal for Redwood students. In front of the library is a courtyard surrounded by four two-story academic wings. (Photos by Howard Glendon) librarian Mildred Mateer has noted.

STUDENTS MORE and more want to go to the library, not just because teacher assigned them to do so; teachers more and more want to use the library as a resource place for themselves. Classes to work in group as research teams and on individual projects.

As Redwood grows, the library's contents will grow. Now there are over 6,000 books for less than 1,700 students. Eventually there will be about 24,000 books for 3,000 students.

"We're not in a hurry to fill shelves as an end in itself," Miss Mateer said. "Within budgetary limits, we want materials which will best serve instruction, which itself is not static."

A current periodical section is backed up with a well-organized storeroom where magazines will be kept from three to five years, available on request. The library subscribes to five newspapers and 48 other periodicals.

There are textbooks, too. The library staff aids teachers and department heads in their selection, purchasing, processing and distribution. A running inventory is kept. Redwood presently has 21,555 texts. Eventually it will have about 45,000.

AUDIO-VISUAL operations are part of the library. Equipment is stored, maintained, distributed and operated for students and teachers.

The Redwood staff now consists of Miss Mateer, a career librarian with a Master's Degree, library credential, and teaching credential; Philip Pease, half-time librarian who also teaches English; math teacher Fred R. Broemmer, audio-visual coordinator; Mrs. Muriel Nordstrand, textbook clerk, and Mrs. Marguerite Gilbert, library clerk.

Besides instructional center for all, the library is a classroom for student library assistants and audio-visual aides. Under Miss Mateer and Broemmer respectively, they are taught, have homework and take tests. They receive class credit.

The large main reading room at Redwood is spectacularly pleasant and light. It is adjoined by a well-supplied reference room which can also serve as a classroom and which has a reserved "overnight" section kept current with basic materials for basic classes like history and English.

Another public section is devoted to periodicals and leisure reading. It contains newspapers, magazines and fiction.

BEHIND THESE public rooms are working and storage areas where diverse business, processing and research goes on.

In the first seven weeks of operation this year, the Redwood library was used by 87 classes for group work. Many were freshmen English classes who come for a planned program on library use. Miss Mateer hopes a similar program, geared to other levels and subjects will be extended as part of regular curriculum.

Most classes using the library have been English and history, but others, like physiology and psychology, have come there to work as research teams, on individual projects or in other ways.

Certainly more and more individual students are attracted to libraries like these in the Tam District. Certainly more and more teachers are taking advantage of an organized program to help in their classroom instruction.

Superintendent Carlisle summed it up this way:

"To make a library the center of the instructional program, it must be a place where students, teachers, and whole classes WANT to come for instruction."

IN ADDITION to several sets of encyclopedias, libraries of the Tamalpais School District keep on hand a wealth of other reference works, readily available from the shelves to the students. Here using some of them at Redwood are, left to right, Lynn Hamilton, Pat Abbott and James Heierle. See pages M-10 and M-11 for additional photos of one of Marin's most modern school libraries.

ADEQUATE SPACE has been allotted the library program in all three of the Tamalpais Union High School District schools. Here you see the Redwood High School library, newest in the district.

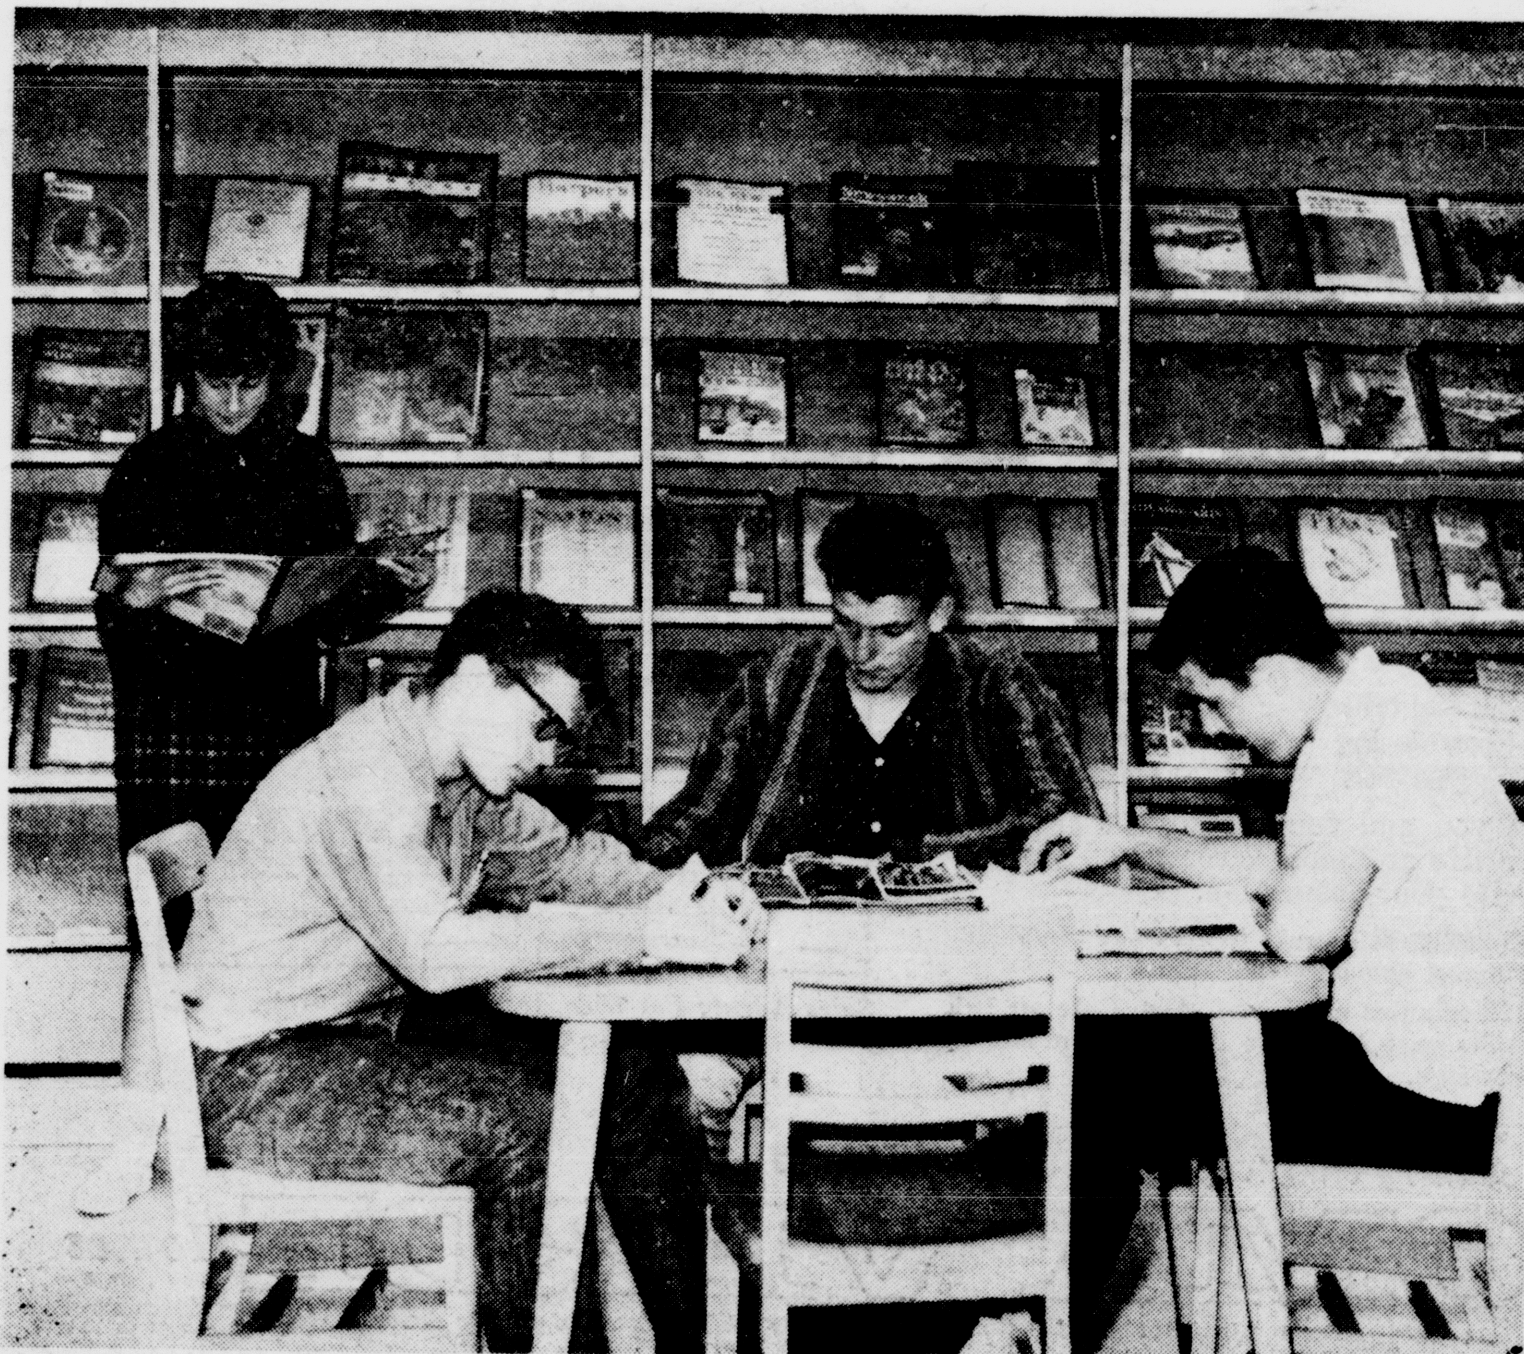

As in the other schools, sufficient space has been provided to make it possible for whole classes to do research there. And, reports the administration, more and more teachers are taking advantage of this opportunity.

PROCESSING BOOKS to get them back on the shelves quickly is a big part of the successful operation of a school library. This key work takes place in the "back room." Here Redwood library clerk Marguerite Gilbert shows student assistants James Selfridge and Anne Woodward the proper procedure.

Some Classics From Europe Provide Listening Pleasure

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, FM & Cultural Guide

Some classics from Europe:
MOZART: Piano Concerto in C, K.503: Rondo in D, K.382 — Alfred Brendel, piano, with Paul Angerer conducting the Pro Musica Orchestra of Vienna—Vox Stereo STGBY 512.110.

One or a large catalog of excellent recordings from France, imported by Vox Productions. Austrian pianist Brendel is concise and yet lyrical where needed in this happy-sounding concerto.

The cover art—Botticelli's "Printemps"—is exactly suited to the joyous music.

SCHUBERT: German Mass; Mass in B Flat—Hans Giliesberger conducting soloists Vienna Chamber Choir and Pro Musica Orchestra—Vox STDL 500.980.

Two of the composer's seven masses, one in German and the other in the traditional Latin, are heard here. The German mass is in the spirit of the lieder and a most ingratiating work.

One wishes the disc were available in stereo to define the many voices somewhat better. However, the sound is acceptable and the performance fine.

PSALMS OF DAVID in musical settings by Handel, Schuetz, and Sweelinck—The Telemann Society Chorus and Orchestra with Janet Wheeler, soprano; John Dennison, bass; conducted by Richard Schultze — Vox Stereo STDL 500.760.

Recorded in this country, and it is a glorious listening experience. The Handel anthem on Psalm 113 is the longest work here, taking up all of side one. Again, joyous music and good recording.

HINDEMITH: Concerto for Violin and Orchestra (Ivry Gitlis / Westphalian Symphony/Hubert Reichert); Concerto for Viola and Orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher" (Gunther Breitenbach/Vienna Symphony/Herbert Haefner) —Vox PL 11980.

Just so one doesn't get the idea old music is all there is to be found in the Vox catalog, here are two important concerti by one of the most important contemporary composers in sparkling interpretations.

The viola concerto is based on old German folk songs—the title means "village musician." The sound, while not stereo, is nevertheless excellent, and the Miro cover art extremely suitable.

THIS WOOD MOSAIC or intarsia by Robert Biancalana is one of the Mill Valley artist's pieces now on display in a one-man show at Art Unlimited, 14 Tillman Place, in San Francisco. The show will continue through February 5.

A Rebel Defends His Beliefs And Attacks His Foes

The publisher has billed Belvedere attorney Vincent Hallinan's "A Lion in Court" as "the uninhibited autobiography of America's most controversial lawyer."

It is both something less and something more than that. A little over half of it is autobiography; about a quarter consists of courtroom anecdotes; the remainder is an exposition of Hallinan's social beliefs and his criticisms of capitalistic democracy as it exists in the United States. Uninhibited, it certainly is.

"Radicals and reformers are not the darlings of their own times," Hallinan observes in chapter 4. "Future generations may regard them with respect, but their own considers them cranks and pests. This should not be surprising. They are attacking some segment of the status quo, and after all, what is that but the system under which the most powerful and influential elements of the population desire to live?"

His own life—or those parts of it he relates in "A Lion in Court"—well bears this out. An earnest crusader for what he considers reforms, Hallinan has twice served terms in a federal prison: Once for contempt of a federal judge, once for income tax evasion.

Hallinan was an angry young man long before he was engaged to defend Harry Bridges, the Australian-born longshoremen's leader, against a charge of defrauding the government in denying in his naturalization hearing that he had ever been a Communist.

It was that trial that brought his sentence for contempt—a sentence that was not executed until he had accepted the Independent Progressive Party's nomination for President of the United States. Scarcely had Hallinan emerged from McNeil Island Federal Prison than he was charged with income tax evasion, convicted and returned to the same prison. Then he lost, for several years, his right to practice his profession. There is little wonder that he emerged from all this a bitter as well as angry man.

In every reformer is an idealist; and this is true also of the man who was born on the "wrong side of town" in San Francisco, and one of whose ways of "getting even" was to buy an estate among the homes of the wealthy (and politically conservative) in Ross. His battles in and out of court exposed and destroyed his idols—all but one.

In discussing the Harry Bridges case, he writes: "Thirty years before, I had thought that the Russian Revolution was the greatest step humanity had taken forward since the French did in their tyrants, and I had heard nothing credible to change my opinion."

In the final chapter, after mentioning his own first visit to the Soviet Union, he says: "Now these (the Russian) people, and they alone, must be credited with instilling a new spirit into humanity which has propelled it further and faster than it has ever moved before."

He spends little time, however, in extolling Russia. He is too busy lancing against those forces in the United States which, he contends, make a mockery of the democracy to which we pay lip service.

Hallinan has been widely and sharply attacked for his beliefs and his activities. He is a masterful self-defender. As an autobiographer, however, he cannot be bothered with the details necessary to make the picture whole. Although he spends a chapter describing his courtship of Vivian Moore, their subsequent years of life together and the upbringing of their family are dismissed with a single sentence on page 282: "Vivian and I had now been married some 20 years and had six sons."

Lest it be thought, though, that Vincent Hallinan is an egomaniac uninterested in his family, one needs only to turn back to the dedication:

"This volume is respectfully dedicated to those other Hallinans—Vivian, Patrick, Terence, Michael, Matthew Conn and Daniel—all of whom are brave soldiers in the war for human equality and emancipation."

There is tenderness in the bitterest of rebels.

"What three gifts would you have?
If you be wise and choose the best,
It may be that you get the rest."

The voice was still.
What answer would I give,
What one would bring back two?
Then suddenly I knew.

To have an open mind, I said,
To see and hear without advice,
To let my fellow friends expound
In freest word and ask no price.
To listen with smiling, quiet attention
Not make my views the only mention.
But then when asked of freely give,
As words flow forth unbidden
To help another heart to live,
To speak in love, in happy pace,
To any nation, creed or race.

"You have chosen wisely,"
The voice responded.
"As long as open minds remain
Love and peace will also reign."

"WHY CAN'T MY MOIRE DRESS BE CLEANED?"

No doubt, your professional drycleaner has warned you against having your moire dress cleaned because spot removal on that particular moire would remove the design. Several times in the past twenty years moires have become popular and each time some of the moires introduced to the market are non-permanent. They will not stand the moisture of spotting, wet-cleaning or even dry steam pressing.

Moires of cellulose acetate rayon are permanent and will withstand moisture, while those of regenerated rayon, silk or cotton are not permanent. When moires become popular there isn't enough of the permanent fiber available and the non-permanent moires flood the market. Perhaps "flood" isn't a good word because any moisture will wipe away the design from non-permanent moires.

Your drycleaner, most likely, has tested the moire fabric of your dress and determined that it cannot be cleaned properly without damage to the design. He has had, over the years, sad experiences with such fabrics and speaks with authority when he advises against any spotting, cleaning or pressing that might bring moisture in contact with your moire dress.

A Record Of Mass Murder As Told At Eichmann Trial

By DON KEOWN

Because testimony was so voluminous, legal aspects so technical, ground covered so great and news coverage necessarily condensed, the trial of Adolf Eichmann only partially accomplished one of its primary purposes — to drive home to public opinion the enormity of the Nazi crimes against the Jewish people and humanity in general.

This will be rectified, however, if enough people read "The Record" by the eminent British jurist Lord Russell.

Readers will be horrified by the generally calm and factual recitation of this prime example of the inhumanity of which mankind is capable, once it abdicates leadership responsibilities to its worst elements.

You read of wholesale killings by the thousands until the slaughter approximated six million Jews. You are told that hundreds of thousands of these victims of blind hatred were children. You read of youngsters who miraculously survived the gas chamber only to have their brains brutally bashed out or to be buried alive by their callous and relentless oppressors.

Lord Russell has written not only a recapitulation of the Eichmann trial, but also a chronicle of the entire Nazi program of persecution of the Jews which finally exploded into a fantastic attempt at genocide. Unfortunately, sometimes it is difficult to tell whether the information the author is relating comes from the trial record or from other sources. And the material could have benefited from better organization and, perhaps, a more dramatic presentation.

But it is all there in horrifying detail. It is an indictment not only of the German people and their collaborators for perpetrating or permitting the coldly calculated atrocities, but also of the other peoples of the world who tolerated them and rose up to destroy Fascism only when it menaced their own welfare.

It should be read, no matter how disgusting some of the details, in the hope that it will shake some of us out of our complacency and cause us, when we read of similar persecutions because of race or religion, sometimes in this very country, to realize that that which is dehumanizing is degrading to us all.

As for Eichmann and justice: A society which frequently metes out the death penalty to those guilty of taking a single life, or even no lives at all, cannot quibble with the execution of this mass murderer and torturer of defenseless non-combatants. The great injustice is that some of Eichmann's colleagues, with perhaps equally bloody hands, seem to have escaped his fate.

THE FIRST thing that struck this reader about the Anthony Trew novel "Two Hours to Darkness" was the feeling that we had read it all somewhere before. Then we realized that this was the result of the number of similarities the new book bears to Herman Wouk's "The Caine Mutiny."

It is almost as though Trew borrowed the basic Wouk plot—and many of his characters—, gave the whole thing a British accent, and then wedded it to the current concern of novelists with the possibility of nuclear war touched off by accident or madness.

True this time the vessel is British—a Polaris-armed submarine.

But there is the certainly-neurotic, probably-psychotic skipper. And that is just the beginning of the similarities in characters and in situations between the new novel and "Caine Mutiny."

The book is, however, far from a total loss for Trew, a South African who served

Keeping The Youngsters Occupied

THE LOTS-TO-DO BOOK by Harrison T. Salmon, Doubleday and Co., 127 pages, soft-cover, $1.

The problem with too many books for children is that the youngsters thumb through them a time or two—and then are through with them.

But Harrison T. Salmon's "The Lots-To-Do Book" is just what its title implies—something to keep the boys and girls occupied for a period of time. And it is offered at what seems a bargain price.

Salmon has crammed the book with puzzles, games, coloring projects, mazes, tricks, jokes, simple do-it-yourself projects, etc.

Planned for youngsters ages 7 to 11, it is the kind of thing mother can give the children with some confidence it will keep them pre-occupied and quiet for a reasonable period of time. And which can be used for that purpose time and time again.

Seems to us it fills a real need.

as an officer in the royal navy during World War II. For a first novel, the writing is fresh and readable. And if it were not for the glaring resemblance to the earlier Wouk book, which may be coincidence, no doubt the plotting would also have the quality of freshness. Trew does, however, seem to weasel a bit in escaping at the end the nuclear problem which he had posed.

"THE BODY at Madman's Bend" must be one of the very best in Arthur W. Upfield's distinguished series of mysteries starring Inspector Napoleon Bonaparte, the half-aborigine Australian detective.

A hard-drinking, wife-beating wastrel disappears on an isolated 40,000-acre sheep ranch along the Darling River. All evidence points to murder. And while no one mourns the loss, it is the indefatigable inspector's job to bring the killer to justice.

A flood complicates the detective's task.

The whole thing is done with Upfield's usual finesse. The colorful Australian back country background and customs are used to maximum benefit. And Inspector Bonaparte, as always, is delightful.

No fan of Bony will want to miss this one.

THOMAS C. MANN is the founder of the Society for the Revival of the Descriptive Epitaph. He is also co-author, with Stephen Greene Press editor Janet Greene, of "Over Their Dead Bodies," a collection of New England gravestone inscriptions from the 1600s to the present.

The authors have divided their collection into four major historical eras: the pioneer and colonial days through 1775; the fledgling years of the new nation, 1776 to 1815; "the age of ferment," 1816 to 1870; and from 1871 on to the present.

Their purpose is to show how epitaphs have reflected history—the changing of ideas and cultures.

Although both humor and tragedy are included, there is no effort on the part of the authors to be either smart-alecky or lugubrious in the tone of their book. It is simply an effort to use these records carved in stone as a sort of "time capsule." The result is interesting—and enlightening.

HER LIFE AS A white Southerner is described by Lillian Smith in the autobiographical "Killers of the Dream," published by Doubleday and Co. It is, she says, the story of how Southern attitudes and prejudices have helped prevent the advent of "the American dream." Cover design by George Giusti.

Our Reviewers Report What's New In Reading

For Home Buyers

THE SLUM MAKERS by Robert Tebbel, Dial Press, 190 pages, $4. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Robert Tebbel is an angry man about the "low-cost" housing business that gave him employment as carpenter and pre-fab sales manager until he entered the advertising and publishing field.

In the foreword to "The Slum Makers," he declares:

"Low-cost home builders are creating in America today one of the most gigantic slums ever seen on the face of the earth, and in the process are involving millions of Americans in oppressive debt for houses that are lower in quality than they are in cost, and subject to quick deterioration."

In the body of the book, he describes how it is done:

The tract house sellers, capitalizing on a well-ingrained American notion that "every man deserves to own his own home," base their sales on "easy financing" rather than the quality of the product. But concealed in the "easy financing" is a pyramid of interest upon interest that might shock the potential buyer if he were aware of it. Moreover, contends Tebbel, many of the houses will not last until the mortgage is paid.

The author has some suggestions for correcting the mess. They are sensible suggestions; however, none of them would do much toward halting the growth of "urban sprawl" that is defacing the landscape, compounding the traffic problem and undermining the tax structure of America's suburban areas.

The potential home buyer would do well to read Tebbel's book. It contains, along with much anger, some practical suggestions in what to look for in a house—and in a mortgage.

He has a love affair and becomes intimate with people who once would have appalled him. He becomes a captive of the invisible cage in which its addicts are held.

Author de Polnay writes with humor and compassion. It is a serious and also an entertaining book.

There Are Many Good Reasons For Planting A Ground Cover

Of all ground covers, the first choice of gardeners is grass.

But there are places where grass is almost impossible to grow; at the base of a dense tree, where heavy shade and encroaching tree roots combine to inhibit grass growth; or on a rugged, sloping hillside where grass is harder to water properly and even harder to mow; or in the sandy soil of a seashore garden where skimpy conditions and frequent neglect are difficult to overcome.

In such situations we turn to other covers to keep the setting neat.

THERE ARE other reasons for planting ground covers, however, and not last-resort reasons, either.

We often plant them strictly on their own merits—for their ornamental value, their scent or their easy-to-care for habits.

The favorite of all ground covering substitutes for grass is ivy. And if you think all ivy looks alike, take a new look at it in the nursery. Ivy is a many-faced family with variegated forms, small leaf forms and green varieties of varying leaf pattern.

Algerian and English ivies are the two main forms, each with its own variations. Ivy is a no-strain cover for sun or shade, needing little attention other than occasional water and infrequent pruning to keep it neat.

ONE OF THE better covers for Marin gardens is the "wild" strawberry, which is native to our coastal regions. Nurserymen offer tamed versions of this which are improved garden forms.

Marin Living

The white blossoms are apt to come most any month of the year with the main show in spring or early summer. These are followed by ornamental fruits which are only rarely edible.

One big improvement in this line is the hybrid ornamental strawberry No. 25 which does bear edible fruit of excellent quality—better in flavor, say most gardeners, than the store-bought berries. Supply is usually limited in this.

Shade, especially dense shade, is always a problem, and many gardeners answer it by planting nothing. They are under the impression that nothing does really well in densest shade. If you believe this, try planting Japanese spurge, a spreading cover which sends up glossy leaves from masses of underground runners.

JAPANESE spurge is a favorite in eastern and southern gardens. It is less familiar here in California, a situation which definitely should be remedied.

For flowers, Aaron's beard is an outstanding ground cover. Spreading by underground runners, Aaron's beard sends up masses of 10 or 12 inch stems, along which two-inch oblong leaves grow in profusion and at the end of which solitary cups of brilliant yellow are borne in summer. These flowers are two to three inches across, showing prominent stamens and attracting honey bees, who know a good thing when they see it.

Aaron's beard is best in sun, but will tolerate some shade. Try it in the parkway, or on a sunny bank that gets its share of water during the year.

Also for flowers, there is the ground-hugging carpet bugle, which sends up short delicate blue spikes in forest-like profusion each spring. Carpet bugle is a good choice for shaded areas—not too shaded, however. It is available in a "giant" form with larger leaves and flower stems up to 10 inches high, as well as a bronze leaf form of rich texture and appearance.

CARPET BUGLE is altogether a good cover.

Mention was made earlier of planting ground covers also for scent, which is what you get from a cover of creeping thyme. Low and mounding, excellent for a sunny hillside, creeping thyme is first in the hearts of many a gardener for the spicy fragrance of its crushed leaves. You can't walk through it without falling in love with its bouquet. Its summer flowers are most often purple though other colors are to be found. They are insignificant, but who cares. The aromatic quality more than pays for itself.

TO ADD A REGAL TOUCH to your garden, plant the Rose Queen, a vigorous hybrid tea just introduced by Germain's Inc. The open blooms are a clear orange-red, but unlike most roses in that color range, the Rose Queen holds its color for an exceptionally long period of time and does not have the tendency toward "petal-burning." Red buds open into four to five-inch double orange-red blooms averaging 35 to 40 petals. An important plus with the Rose Queen is its delightful fragrance.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- ✓Roses, fruit trees and many flowering shrubs should be pruned now. If you're in doubt, ask your nurseryman's advice.
- ✓Set out calendulas, iceland poppies, pansies, violas and fairy primroses for late winter bloom.
- ✓Stay off the grass when it's wet. Mowing when it is soggy usually does more harm than good.

- ✓Set out plants of florists cyclamen for immediate bloom. You'll find them in pots and by the flat in nurseries now.
- ✓Sweet peas may be planted now from seed. They are happiest with an early start so that they germinate while the weather is still cool.

There's Always Room For Fruit Trees In The Garden

No single phase of garden life can give the gardener so much pleasure as harvesting fruit from his back yard. Be it one tree or 10, the home orchard is something everyone should have.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen spends more than a little time trying to convince people that any garden, small or large, can accommodate a fruit tree or trees. Even a rooftop apartment can handle dwarf trees in tubs. And the smallest garden is large enough to grow one, two, or even three trees.

As an example, nurserymen point out that a narrow strip of garden, hemmed in by a wall or fence, is perfect for espaliered fruit trees. Both pears and apples lend themselves to the espalier treatment, taking up a minimum of room and yielding a surprisingly large crop in the bargain.

Your nurseryman will show you how to train these trees so that they may be grown in a flat espalier against the garden wall.

Dwarf fruit trees are also a small garden solution, since three of them will usually fit the space that one normal size tree requires. Try dwarf peaches, dwarf apricots and apples. These more than others will contain themselves in limited spaces. They have not only the advantage of space saving, but also the ability to bear good crops earlier in life than regular size trees.

Dwarf fruit trees produce normal size fruit, too, so have no fears in that respect.

The ideal situation is to have enough space to plant regular orchard size trees in quantity. But make no mistake about it. The pears, plums, peaches, apples and others that are furnished in combination form, in dwarf form or on espaliers furnish top quality crops. The fruit is large and healthy and the crop is heavier in proportion to the tree size and shape than it normally might be in a commercial orchard.

Spray Or Dust? Depends On Rain

Take this advice from a master rose grower: Dust your roses when the foliage is wet, after a rain, and spray when the foliage is dry.

One is just as good as the other in protecting your rose plants from insects and diseases. The reason you use both is for convenience.

When the foliage is wet, the dust sticks better. There's no need to mix the spray with water as in liquid sprays. You can cover a large number of bushes in a very short time.

On the other hand, a liquid spray will stick better when the foliage is dry.

Of course you can use either spray whether the foliage is wet or dry, but there is more efficiency by using the two types, in accordance with the moisture conditions of the foliage.

HOLLYWOOD HAS LONG been the haven of beautiful women, and here are five of the loveliest actresses in screen history in memorable poses. All are featured in the hour-long special, "Hollywood: The Fabulous Era," to be seen Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. on KGO. Shown here in scenes from the documentary history of the movies, 1927 to the present day, are (1) Jean Harlow; (2) Marilyn Monroe; (3) Elizabeth Taylor; (4) Betty Grable, and (5) Hedy Lamarr.

Film Glamor To Glitter Again

Clark Gable baring his chest to Claudette Colbert, James Cagney pushing a grapefruit into Mae Clarke's face, Dick Powell warbling to Ruby Keeler, Mae West extending her now-famous invitation and Johnny Weissmuller swinging through the trees of an ersatz Africa —

These are but five of the nearly four-score scenes David L. Wolper and Jack Haley Jr. have collected for their hour-long documentary, "Hollywood: The Fabulous Era," which will be presented Wednesday at 7:30 on KGO.

THE PRODUCTION, which is narrated by Henry Fonda, is the Wolper-Haley sequel to their highly-praised salute to the silent screen, "Hollywood: The Golden Years," and the forerunner of their next venture, "Hollywood: The Great Stars," which will be seen March 13.

All told, 113 stars are put on parade.

Their movies—71 in number—run from the first talkies in 1927, "The Jazz Singer" with Al Jolson, to Marlon Brando in "Mutiny On The Bounty." With these films as the boundaries, Wolper and Haley promise a painstaking study of the movies, the men and women who made them and the sometime bizarre Hollywood life in the fabulous era.

Fonda, a star in his own right for the more than 40 movies he has filmed, says the documentary tells Hollywood's story "like no book possibly could."

"The special includes scenes no one will ever forget. They are all there—all the great moments and all the great performers," Fonda adds as he pinpoints such scenes as:

The great silent screen lover, John Gilbert, attempting to bridge the gap between the silents and sound and failing because of his high-pitched voice;

Edward G. Robinson accepting the moniker "Little Caesar";

The Marx Brothers getting laughs in an hilarious ship-board scene in "A Night At The Opera" when they cram what seems like three dozen people in a closet-sized stateroom;

Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire tripping the light fantastic in "Top Hat";

James Stewart delivering an emotion-packed filibuster as the freshman congressman in "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington";

Mickey Rooney having a man-to-man talk with his "father," Lewis Stone, in "Love Finds Andy Hardy";

Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald singing in "Rose Marie";

Ronald Colman returning to the mystic village of Shangri-la in "Lost Horizon";

Sultry Hedy Lamarr announcing "I am Tondelayo" in "White Cargo";

Paul Muni making his experiments in "The Story Of Louis Pasteur";

W. C. Fields brazenly challenging an antagonistic world in "The Barber Shop";

Lauren Bacall telling Humphrey Bogart that all he has to do is whistle if he wants her in "To Have And Have Not";

Marlon Brando acting in the memorable "On The Waterfront" and Marilyn Monroe wriggling through "Some Like It Hot."

THESE ARE just some of the highlights of the past. But Wolper and Haley have not been content to close their books on Hollywood's history. In special arrangements with movie producers, they have secured scenes from three major films that have just been released—and all on a roadshow basis—"Mutiny On The Bounty," "Taras Bulba" and "Lawrence Of Arabia."

- 5:30 A.M.
4 (:35) Lord's Prayer

THE HIGHLIGHTS OF a fabulous career in music will be seen Thursday on the one-hour Purex Special, "The World of Benny Goodman," to be carried by KRON at 8:30 p.m.

At left, Goodman is shown in a hilarious mood with another jazz immortal, Louis Armstrong, back in 1953. And at right, in 1960, the very hep King of Thailand visited the King of Swing in Goodman's apartment.

by Drexel

From the great furniture periods of centuries past, Drexel has created a correlated classic for today! Masterful design has been blended into one magnificent collection for living, dining and bedrooms. While completely classic in form, contemporary function cleverly threads its way through all pieces.
